

Homeowners Rap Proposed Sewer Rate Hike

Some 400 Daly City residents listened Monday to the North San Mateo County Sanitation District Board of Directors and consultants outline its plans for construction of a $6.3 million secondary sewage treatment plant in the heart of the city.

Most of the some two dozen persons appearing before the board, during a public hearing held at the Westlake Community Clubhouse, protested the rate schedules set forth by the directors.

An average homeowner in Daly City would be required to pay a minimum fee of $36 per year, regardless of the size of his home, family or number of water closets.

Apartment house owners would be hit with an annual sewer service charge of $36 per unit.

Edward King, speaking for Westlake Associates, Inc., owners of 3,000 apartment units in Daly City (former Doelger holdings) protested what he called "inequity of the charges."

Another resident asked why the public hearing was even being held after the Board of Directors — Daly City Mayor McRobert Stewart, Councilman Anthony Giammona and County Supervisor James V. Fitzgerald — had passed unanimously resolution 33 on April 15 outlining the expenditures for the new plant and service charges.

District consulting attorney Jim Morton explained that passage of the resolution was necessary to show state and federal agencies the district's intentions on the matter and to qualify the district for some 87½ per cent in government funding for the project.

It also was explained that new rigid water quality control laws gave the district little choice in updating the treatment plant.

The fact that the directors already had passed the resolution does not prevent them from adjusting service rates during its next public meeting on June 3, it also was explained.

Giammona and Stewart pointed out that their intentions were to follow government guidelines on giving senior citizen homeowners special consideration, depending on their income and family size.

What the district plans is construction of a trunk sewer line between Sullivan Avenue and Lake Merced Boulevard, costing some $800,000; purchase of land from Daly City, now adjacent to the North County treatment plant, for $350,000, and expand the treatment plant to include secondary treatment with a system for reclaiming wastewater.

Total capital outlay will be some $6,699,000, with the local share only $1,144,000.

But the district must prove its "good faith" by having 30 per cent of the total funds on hand before the project even hits the drawing board.

Once completed, the plant will be able to handle about six million gallons of wastewater daily and someday will market reclaimed water for use on golf courses cemeteries and other green belts.

The cost of the reclamation plant, however, does not include special piping to carry the treated waters to this potential market, it was learned.

Operation and maintenance costs of the plant will be almost 1 million dollars a year, according to consulting engineer Armand Anoushian, co-partner of Robert V. Bernicchi, of Resources Engineering & Management Consulting Engineers.

Bernicchi's firm will undertake the engineering on the new plant. His firm also conducted the study and subsequent environmental impact study for a reported $48,000.

"One irate senior citizen, Julius Castellani, pointed out that Bernicchi also has been the district's consulting engineer for the past several years.

Castellani asked the directors, "Why don't you go to bonds," instead of levying the sewer service charge?

The district officials replied it was unlikely a bond issue would pass and local monies are needed immediately to qualify the plant for government funding.

Other complaints voiced included why the hearing was held during the day when most homeowners were at work?

"Because 1 p.m. is when we usually hold our meeting," NSMCSO chairman Stewart replied.

Dave Caffereta, a retired Daly City employee, asked if the district had checked into tying into the proposed $640 million San Francisco plant?

It was explained the San Francisco plant is a long way in the future and the current timetable for construction of the Daly City plant would put it into operation sometime in 1977.

Controversy Expected

Interstate 380 Impact Reported

By BOB PETERSON

The State Department of Transportation (DOT) Monday morning released a summary of an Environmental Impact Statement (EIS) and other information concerning its proposal to extend Interstate 380 from San Bruno to Pacifica.

That action revived a Portola Freeway proposed expansion that has been dormant since the Sierra Club in 1971 filed suit charging the state had not properly shown what adverse environmental effects would result to San Bruno's Crestmoor Canyon from such road construction.

DOT officials, who conceded, "this (project renewal) is obviously going to generate controversy," said that if financing were immediately available and all necessary official approval were obtained the project could begin in 1978.

The construction, however, is programmed for 1982-83.

According to DOT officials, the EIS will be circulated for the next 60 days in an effort to obtain input prior to the preparation of a final environmental report.

In addition, a $15,000 scale model of the proposed extension, which was viewed by San Bruno and Pacifica officials at DOT district offices in San Francisco, will be made available to the general public in both Pacifica and San Bruno.

The scale model will be on display at Pacifica's Sanchez School for two weeks beginning June 2. In July, the model will be taken to an as yet undetermined display site in San Bruno.

After the 60 days of review of the EIS have elapsed, the plan is to hold a public hearing (or hearings), possibly at Skyline College in San Bruno, about August, according to DOT officials.

DOT officials said it probably would take a year to reach the point where a final EIS could be prepared and to receive Federal Highway Administration approval of the project.

The summary EIS, which is actually a portion of the total EIS, offers seven alternative solutions to the "problem" of the "increasingly urgent need for an adequate east-west transportation facility" between the coast and Interstate 280. Cost is estimated at $50 million.

The proposal selected by DOT consists of a four-lane freeway with a 54-foot planted median strip separating the traveled ways and a tunnel through Sweeney Ridge. The tunnel is estimated to cost an additional $7 million. All costs are "at today's estimates."

A second proposal is identical to that selected, with the exception of the tunnel. Instead there would be an open cut, which consultant meteorologists' estimates of effect on weather ranged anywhere from "negligible" to "a noticeable increase in fog penetration and wind" for San Bruno.

"Traffic projections based on current Department of Finance population projections indicate that the purpose of the project would be achieved best by the (proposed alternative) since both provide room for additional lanes if necessary or exclusive bus lanes — whichever (if either) were dictated by future needs," states the summary EIS.

According to the summary, three gas stations would be purchased as a result of the 380 extension. In addition, related work on Route 1 improvements would mean acquisition of 20 single family residences, 10 multiple units and two duplex units. Eighteen commercial properties also would be affected, all on the Pacifica side of the proposed project. Relocation assistance would be provided by the state.

"The looping interchange in the Vallejo-Rockaway Beach area would radically change the appearance of the presently gutted quarry slopes (which would be contoured) and virtually eradicated the small rus-

Numerous Commendations

Terry Hanebeck: 'Supercop'

By FRANK LAPIERRE

They're beginning to call 25 year old Terry Hanebeck "Supercop" around the Daly City police station.

The talk is only poking fun at the good-natured husky young officer, who, since joining the department in Sept. 1969 has been the recipient of many awards and letters of commendation from throughout the country.

Latest episode involving Officer Hanebeck occurred on April 23 while he was driving along a Marin County freeway and noticed a driver in the next car slump over the wheel, apparently suffering a heart attack.

Hanebeck succeeded in stopping the runaway vehicle by intentionally driving his car into the other car and forcing it into a center divider strip. Its occupant was, unfortunately, dead at the wheel.

But the California Highway Patrol credited Hanebeck with undoubtedly saving the lives of other motorists on the busy roadway.

Late in the afternoon of Feb. 11, 1971, Hanebeck was off-duty near the boathouse at Lake

Merced when a police helicopter, with its crew of two, crashed into the lake.

Without hesitation, (See Page 2, Column 4)

Six Seek Title of Miss Daly City

Sandra LaRay Howard

Nanette Madrigal

Karen Wendriner

Cindy Cartwright

Marilyn Wong

Linda Sam

Six girls will be vying for the title of Miss Daly City when the annual pageant is held June 1 at 8 p.m. in the Serramonte High School Little Theater.

Contestants are Sandra LaRay Howard, Nanette Madrigal, Karen Wendriner, Cindy Cartwright, Marilyn Wong and Linda Sam.

The Daly City Chamber of Commerce sponsors the event annually and scholarships, awards and other prizes are given to winners.

"More than a Beauty Pageant" is the theme for this year's event intended to erase the stigma that such contests are solely for the sake of girls possessing great beauty.

According to Maureen O'Conner, judges will be Marie Venarucci, former Miss South San Francisco; Lorna Fordyce, dance studio owner; Patricia Bartholomew, owner of a San Francisco modeling agency; Pete Heath, owner of Serramonte Music Center; and Brian Shea, photographer.

Mistress of ceremonies will be Dianne Wagner, Miss California 1972, and master of ceremonies will be Stephen Bowman, assistant producer of the Miss Fremont pageant.

Northgate Transit Company Will Increase Passenger Fares

Northgate Transit Company, which operates passenger bus service over eight routes in northern portions of the San Francisco Peninsula, has received authorization to increase passenger fares.

The action by the State Public Utilities Commission last week will allow the bus company to increase fares from a basic 25 cents for regular passengers, to 30 cents, and a student fare of 15 cents to 20 cents enroute to and from school.

The bus company serves portions of San Francisco, Daly City, Colma, South San Francisco, Pacifica and San Bruno.

In addition to the above fares, the company charges 35 cents for evening and weekend trips and a 10-cent zone charge is collected on the Daly City-South San Francisco route.

The evening fares, weekend fares and zone charge will remain at their present levels, the PUC said.

Northgate cited increased costs since 1971 in support of its application.

These include increases in costs of fuel, insurance, office rent, yard rent, maintenance and other items.

The company also proposed to employ a mechanic-traffic manager who would be responsible for the operational performance of the fleet, including the performance of periodic inspection of the vehicles, as well as inspecting buses which have undergone repairs, providing emergency assistance to vehicles enroute as necessary, and supervising the fleet's operations.

"The employment of a competent and responsible mechanic-traffic manager,"

Daly City Youth Found Hanged

A 22-year-old Daly City youth, who only last Saturday moved back into his parents' home after living alone for several months, hanged himself from a water pipe in the family home at 55 Midvale St. Monday night.

Gary Gaviglio, a driver for Sparkies' Special Delivery Service of San Francisco, was talking calmly to his father and mother in the home about 8:30 p.m., excused himself and went into the basement, according to Coroner's Investigator Don Wymann.

About 15 minutes later his mother went to see where the youth was and found his body hanging from the pipe, a rope around his neck, Wymann said.

The father, Eugene Gaviglio, cut his son down and rushed him to Mary's Help Hospital where he was pronounced dead on arrival at 8:47 p.m.

Wymann said he understood the boy had a history of mental distress.

New Look for DC Chamber

The Greater Daly City Chamber of Commerce may be just that — greater — if ambitious new proposals made by directors at a recent meeting come into being.

The Daly City Council Monday heard a proposal outlining plans to hire a full-time chamber manager, an assistant manager, secretary and move into new offices.

Al Vial, first vice president of the Chamber, in a letter to City Manager David Rowe asked for $25,000 in city aid — more than three times the amount now allocated to the chamber by the city.

But the new chamber look will generate $3,700 Vial predicted.

Coupled with the $600 allotted by San Mateo County and the $8,500 from current membership, the total budget will be set at $37,800, Vial said.

"We expect our new officers (there is an upcoming election in the chamber) and Board to be very active in this reorganization effort which will entail special assignments and duties for each," Vial wrote in a May 15, 1974 letter to Rowe.

Vial pointed out that Peter J. Markovich, who has been the Chamber manager for the past 28 years on a part-time basis, working out of his Mission Street office, will remain as fulltime manager with a staff assistant.

It was expected that Markovich would turn over the reins of his insurance-accounting business to his wife, Jean, and son, while he devotes complete attention to furthering the chamber.

Rowe commented some two weeks ago that it was his and some councilmen's feelings that the chamber take a more vital role in developing new businesses in the city.

Cannon Bags An Arm

A giant plastic cannon netted a casualty last Friday afternoon — its 3½-year old owner.

South San Francisco firemen reported a visit by Mr. and Mrs. Charles Markley of 112 Eucalyptus Ave.

They brought in their son, Richard, whose arm was jammed all the way into the cannon.

After tugging, firemen began peeling off the plastic.

Informer Shoots Self In Chief's Office

By FRANK LAPIERRE

The 37-year-old Pacifican who shot and killed himself in Pacifica police chief Mel Nelson's office Thursday morning was a known police informer and had been working with the chief on several narcotics cases in the past three years.

Chief Nelson said he first met the suicide victim, identified as Hector Lugo, of 328 Heathcliff Drive, three years ago when the man came to him with a problem regarding his girlfriend, Patricia Sandiego, 35, 249 Banks St., San Francisco.

According to Lugo, Miss Sandiego had a "heavy" narcotics habit and he needed help in "getting her straight."

After the chief helped Lugo with the problem, the man turned informant for the department — preferring to deal with Pacifica chief Nelson rather than San Francisco police, on a number of drug cases.

Wednesday, Lugo went to the Pacifica Police Station and was told the chief was out of the office.

The man came back Thursday with a small boy in hand.

Lugo was allowed into the chief's office, having gone in a number of times before. This time, however, Lugo pulled out a .22 caliber handgun and told the chief he had just killed his girlfriend, because he allegedly was "sick and tired of her drug habit," the chief said Friday.

Lugo next told Chief Nelson he was going to kill himself.

Nelson talked Lugo into letting the 10-year-old son of Miss Sandiego go to another office.

Upon his return to his own office, Nelson was confronted by Lugo holding a gun on him.

The chief retreated to the hallway, where other officers had gathered, and soon heard a shot.

They re-entered the chief's office to find Lugo sprawled on the floor in a pool of blood.

"He wasn't really threatening me. We had been friends, of sorts, for the past three years," said Chief Nelson, who was unarmed throughout the episode.

San Francisco homicide inspectors Dave Toschi and Bill Armstrong went to Miss Sandiego's flat and found the woman dead with gunshot wounds in the head and chest.

She had been shot with a .22 caliber weapon, the same type Lugo used on himself.

In all, Lugo held chief Nelson at gunpoint in his office for almost an hour and a half while he talked about his problems, the chief said.

There were unconfirmed reports in police circles that Lugo had been working on a "really big" drug case with San Francisco and Peninsula narcotics agents.

the commercial district in Rockaway Beach," states the summary EIS.

As to the Crestmoor Canyon area, it was stated that "no rare or endangered species are known to be affected" by the proposed route.

"In addition to about 160 species of land and water birds found as either residents or transients in the project area, the wildlife population is estimated to represent about 43 species of land mammals, 11 species of amphibians and 16 species of reptiles. An endangered species, the San Francisco garter snake, may inhabit about five acres of the right of way required by the proposal," states the summary EIR.

The summary EIR also stated that no known historical or archaeological sites are located within the project area, and that ambient noise levels were measured and found to satisfy state and federal standards, if jet noise is discounted.

Under the proposed alternative, the soils disrupted in connection with the tunnel construction would be stored and the so-called "saddle area" would be rebuilt.

The project area is subject to earthquakes, crossing the San Andreas fault, and to seismic sea waves. According to the proposal, the project would meet the latest in earthquake design. It is estimated in the summary EIR that "about 250 acres of vegetation would be removed, 215 classified as grassland, brushland or scrub forest, and about 25 acres classified as forest, woodland and riparian or cultivated."

"Virtually all of this acreage represents a direct loss of significant wildlife habitat," states the summary EIS. "In addition to this direct removal, some 350 acres of wildlife habitat would be separated from the vast region of open space to the south," states the summary EIR.

Mitigation measures will include reuniting by means of rebuilding and revegetating the saddle.

"The basic approach to mitigating the aesthetic impact of 'intrusion' by 380 through the natural scenic corridor between Routes 1 and 35 is to adapt as well as is practically possible to the existing topography by sidehill cuts and fills, slope rounding and revegetation," it was stated.

The fact remains: a battle looms, and everyone familiar with past fights on the freeway extension issue knows it.

Daly City 'Supercop'

Hanebeck dove into the murky waters in a desperate attempt to save the occupant trapped inside. Although inside, although his attempt to rescue the San Francisco officer trapped in the tangled wreckage of the craft was in vain, Hanebeck's action reflected the young officer's determination, and for his actions he was awarded the Meritorious Award from the Peninsula Police Officers Association.

The Red Cross likewise praised Hanebeck and awarded him their Certificate of Recognition for Extraordinary Personal Action.

Hanebeck is an experienced diver and swimmer and has an instructor's certificate from the Red Cross.

In April 1972, the late Daly City police chief Roland A. Petrocchi commended Hanebeck for singlehandedly apprehending and holding two robbery suspects out of Pacifica.

Pacificia Police Chief Mel Nelson likewise commended the young officer — a former Daly City police cadet — for this action.

Following court action on the case a woman juror congratulated, in writing, Hanebeck's important testimony.

In early 1973, Chief Petrocchi again commended Hanebeck for apprehending several burglars responsible for possession of false identifications, which later resulted in charges against them for burglary and possession of stolen property. This followed long weeks of investigation.

February 1973, the scene in chief Petrocchi's office was repeated — Hanebeck again was commended after arresting burglars in the Abraham Lincoln school.

It wasn't until eight months later that Hanebeck was commended by Chief Petrocchi for assisting in quelling a large scale disturbance at the Cow Palace Oct. 6, 1973.

March 30, 1974 found Hanebeck being praised by Macy's Department store in Serramonte for his work in preventing a successful burglary.

Thursday, May 23, it will have been one month since Hanebeck received the written commendation from the CHP on the freeway incident.

Odds are even money around the department that any day will find the young officer again being called on the carpet — for more commendations.

"He's a natural born cop. What more can I say," acting Police Chief David Hansen said.

In particular, we note the extension of service to several neighborhoods previously without local transit, the recent increases in service frequency on several routes and the increased distribution of timetables to the public, and the replacement of several older vehicles with newer equipment.

The fare increases may be made effective on five days' notice to the Commission and the public. The bus company is required to give notice to the public by posting in its buses an explanation of the increased fares.

Salary Decrease For Principals

Two Jefferson Elementary School District directors will undergo title changes and salary decreases as the result of a decision made at a special board meeting recently.

A motion was made by Trustee Beverly Forrester and seconded by Trustee David Parker to place the salaries of the director of guidance and the director of instructional materials on the K6 principals' salary scale.

Supt. Keith Breen recommended the title change from director to coordinator, and that the contracts be changed from 12 months to 10 months.

He also suggested that the salaries be changed to that of the junior high school principals' scale, a $2,000-$3,000 decrease.

He said the directors' present salaries are between $23-$24,000 a year. From director to coordinator on the intermediate level would mean a reduction of about $2259, and on the K6 level, about $2820, he said.

Lowell Jennings, director of guidance, requested that action be continued on the matter, but the board voted 4-0 in support of Mrs. Forrester's motion.

Abstained, James Cranna. Abstained, "in view of Jennings' remarks."

The board also voted to rehire consultant Marge Tobias, for $4,000 a year.

Mrs. Forrester indicated that the district can not pay her anymore because it would conflict with Social Security benefits.

Although the pay rate was noted as being "one of the best buys going," the vote was not unanimous.

Cranna said, "In view of the economy, I will vote no."

Public Hearing to Be Held on Revised Sign Ordinance

What some Daly City officials feel is a "watered-down" version of a new sign ordinance will be the subject of a public hearing sometime in late June.

The city's Planning Department, obviously bowing to pressure from merchant groups in the Junipero Serra-Mission Street business districts, has revised its one-tough draft law dealing with signs.

Biggest complaint of merchants is the amortization clauses in the proposed law. They wanted a "grandfathering" clause, but planners rejected the idea — at first.

After several heated discussions on the issue — both in private and public sessions — the planners relented and rewrote the section, offering alternatives to the schedule for replacing or tearing down "illegal" signs.

The merchants maintained that once a sign was approved by the city, and a use permit issued to erect a sign, it could not be called illegal.

Planners countered that laws could be revised, rescinding previous statutes.

In the latest revision, Alternative D, dealing with all on-premise signs constructed in compliance with previous laws, may stay where they are if they meet certain guidelines.

The alternative would prohibit a merchant from altering a sign in any manner unless it was made to conform to the new law, except for minor maintenance "required for safety purposes."

Another condition included in the law states that upon change of ownership of a business a non-conforming sign will either be torn down or made to conform.

In any case, the planners gave the signs — illegal or not — a longer lease on life.

Instead of a maximum of three years for some signs, the time allowance has been extended to 12 years from date the ordinance is adopted, it was understood.

Gardening Contract To Continue

The Jefferson Elementary School District's Board of Trustees plans to continue its gardening contract with Abbey Homestead Nurseries until a court decision requires otherwise.

Trustees took the stance after learning the California School Employees Association (CSEA) is challenging the legality of its $90,000 gardening contract.

The CSEA believes the work should be done by school district employees.

John Lynch, the district's finance administrator, said last Wednesday the Abbey Homestead Nurseries arrangement is more feasible financially.

He said the JESD has no gardening equipment.

He said the purchase of gardening equipment would cost the district from $50,000 to $75,000.

"Hypothetically, if we hired 10 people at fairly close to $10,000 each per year, salaries would be up to $100,000," Lynch added.

Lynch indicated the Jefferson Union High School District, which has its own employees and equipment for five schools, "is in excess of $150,000, and the total acreage is less than our total 21 school sites."

The contract must be renewed annually, prior to May 30, according to Supt. Keith Breon.

Contractor Honors Employees

Williams & Burrows, Inc. general contractors with main offices in Belmont, presented service awards to 31 employees, including six from the North County, at their annual dinner in San Mateo Friday.

The firm is noted for building the Royal Coach Inn of San Mateo, Shriners Hospital, Peninsula Hospital and several retirement complexes in the Bay Area.

Frank Burrows, president of the company, presented the awards at the Villa Hotel in San Mateo to Andrew Miller, San Mateo (25 years); George A. Roesch, San Carlos (15 years); Gil C. Almonte, Pacifica, Richard Cheechov, San Bruno; Steven M. Cheechov, Colma; Jack B. Jones, San Mateo; Willie M. Lewis, East Palo Alto; Don V. Loewen, San Mateo; Robert M. Weinkauf, San Carlos. All are 10 year awards.

Donald E. Boldt, Redwood City; Louise Bradford, Daly City; Robert C. Cordts, South San Francisco; Mary Ann Durr, Redwood City; Shirley McMurray, Pacifica; and Peter Welch, Foster City. All are five year awards.

San Bruno Asks Bids on Construction

San Bruno City Council has approved plans and specifications and authorized a call for bids on the proposed $500,000 downtown San Mateo Avenue construction project.

The firm of Kirker Chapman and Associates prepared the plans and specifications.

In addition, the council approved retroactively a $21,639 purchase ordered by City Engineer Leo Van Dusen of eight-inch cast iron pipe and fittings for water line construction on the job.

Van Dusen said he went ahead with the order to United States Pipe Co. without authorization in order to insure a June delivery. The order had to be made during the week of April 22, he said.

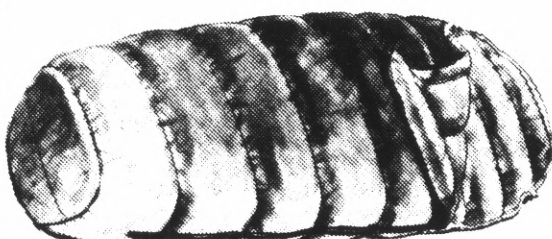

A second firm, Pacifica States Pipe Co., according to Van Dusen, could not promise delivery until December, which is after the project is scheduled to be completed.

Council Hears Protest

Pacifica Increases Sewer Service Fees

Pacifica councilmen heard several protests May 13 to a hefty increase in the city's sewer service fee — and voted unanimously to adopt the increase as originally proposed.

Protests also were raised against a plan, proposed the previous week by Mayor Aubrey Lumley, to finance a new civic center, through the use of three-quarters million dollars realized through sale of the Linda Mar sewer plant site.

No one questioned the original intent of the increase. Federal law mandated cities receiving Clean Water Grants pay for the operation, improvement, and replacement out of a "sewer service revenue program," according to City Manager David Thompson.

This means the city must raise some $470,000 to $492,000 a year, of which some $290,000 already is being financed out of both the general fund and the current five-year-old sewer service charge.

The current charge is $18 a year per home and $27 for most categories of businesses.

Restaurateur Nick Gust protested the plan to increase most businesses to $60 a year while increasing homes to $40. Most homes, he pointed out, use the sewage treatment facilities far more than the average business. In addition, both a person living alone in a small house and a big family would pay $40.

"Businessmen pay 50 per cent for the privilege of holding the title of businessmen," he declared. "Many of them do not even make a profit as high as the average salary." He also protested the projected $3,600 charge on his 92-room hotel and extra restaurant fees.

A report was received from Marilyn Peters, chairwoman of the Ad Hoc Committee for Sewer Service Charges, named for the purpose of investigating such discrepancies.

The committee recommended a public hearing, at which citizens would have the right to appeal their sewer service fees if they feel they are not equitable.

The committee urged selection of a committee to study other equitable methods for determining the fees.

Finally, Mrs. Peters reported the committee believed the proceeds from sale of the Linda Mar plant should be used solely to reduce sewer fees.

The last point was echoed by Kathy McGuire of Vallemar.

She agreed with Mayor Lumley on the need for a new Civic Center, to replace the converted school building.

The $900,000 available from sale of the Linda Mar plant plus capital improvement funds, could better be used, she asserted, for more vital needs, such as a new firehouse, flood control, an adequate planning staff, a four-wheel drive police car — even in alleviation of the tax-rate, to compensate for reassessment this year.

Her plea was greeted with applause by the packed hall.

"If we spent $450,000 a year for the sewer fund," Farber asked, "What would we do for the third year?"

"That would give you time to work out an equitable fee schedule," Mrs. McGuire said.

Mayor Aubrey Lumley said funds from sale of the Linda Mar plant could go only for capital improvements.

"I would be the first to protest it's being used for on-going expenses," he added.

"By keeping the fund intact," Farber said, "the taxpayer is getting something. We are paying off the old bonds at 4½ per cent, and investing the $900,000 at nine per cent."

Emory Lebonville, president of the Sharp Park Improvement Council, pointed out that whereas the property tax is deductible for income taxes, a sewer service charge is not.

He said if the property tax is reduced by the amount of the sewer service fee, the owners of undeveloped land will reap a huge windfall.

Councilmen decided to keep the proposed fee schedule, inequities and all, and to appoint an ad hoc committee to study the problem.

In addition, they increased the annual sewer service standby fees for unimproved land.

A motion by Farber to lower the tax rate by the amount of the sewer service charge increase failed, for lack of a second.

Plans for San Bruno Mountain To Be Aired at Public Meeting

Plans for a new community of 30,000 people on San Bruno Mountain will be aired at a public meeting sponsored by the Environmental Quality Coordinating Council of San Mateo County tomorrow at 8 p.m. in the Little Theater of El Camino High School at 1320 Mission Road, South San Francisco.

Robert Follett, general manager of Visitation Associates, and Planning Consultant Adam Krivatsy will describe the proposal for a "complete community, a plan where people can live, work, and rest in a rich, natural, and varied environment."

San Mateo County Planning Director Donald A. Woolfe will describe the county's process for evaluating the plans and will outline the opportunities for the public to get its input into the process.

The Visitation Rancho plan, which is currently being reviewed by the county and neighboring cities, envisions 12,500 new housing units on San Bruno Mountain. These would be located on 371 acres lying in the saddle of the Mountain and on the slopes adjacent to Daly City, Brisbane, and South San Francisco.

In addition to the planned regional park, the developer has allocated 800 acres to recreation and open space. The remainder of the 1400 acres would be devoted to schools, playgrounds, roads, and a town center in the heart of the saddle, according to the developer's plans.

There will be time during the meeting for questions, answers, and brief comments to help clarify the issues to be resolved during the forthcoming public hearings.

For details, call Mrs. Marion Softky at 329-0256.

DC Man Acquitted in Neighborhood Shooting

A jury has agreed with a defense attorney that circumstances justified a Daly City man's shooting at a racing car in his neighborhood. One of six bullets pierced a man's neck.

Larry Turley, 36, a cable car conductor, was acquitted of two charges of assault with a deadly weapon late Thursday by a San Mateo County Superior Court Jury which deliberated for six hours. Trial was before Judge Frank Piombo in Redwood City.

"The circumstances and aggravated conduct of the two victims clearly justified Turley's actions," said G. Robert Kane, his attorney. Kane is a former prosecutor himself.

According to Kane, last Oct. 30 the two victims, both

20, "started racing up Northridge Drive in Daly City, panic stopping, leaving 50 to 60 feet of skid marks. On the third race, the car jumped the curve and knocked down palm trees on Turley's property. That's when he fired six shots to stop the car. One of them ricocheted and struck one of the victim's in the neck. He has since recovered."

Kane noted that several of Turley's neighbors testified at the trial that they would have done the same as the defendant.

"He didn't intend to injure anyone, but to keep the vehicle from coming into his house," Kane said.

Prosecutor was Charles Pierpoint of the district attorney's office.

Supervisors to Inspect Colma Project

A $500,000 storm drain project which is expected to relieve serious and recurring flooding in the Garden Valley area of Daly City is nearing completion, it was announced by County Engineer S. H. Cantwell Jr.

Members of the Board of Supervisors and the Daly

City Council have scheduled a field trip to view the East Colma Creek improvements Wednesday May 19 at 11:30 a.m., Cantwell said.

In addition to the Garden Valley Area, the project is expected to alleviate flooding along El Camino Real in the unincorporated area between A street near Daly City and D street near Colma, Cantwell said.

Sharing the costs of the new facility were the Federal Highway Administration ($113,123), the County ($47,717), the State ($44,980), and the North San Mateo County Sanitation district ($12,787), together with property assessments which totalled $294,400.

Some 1650 feet of storm drain conduit will now be carrying storm water runoff from a 100-acre area including much of the westerly slope of San Bruno Mountain, Cantwell reported.

Political Expediency, Infrequent Use

Engineers Explain Reasons for BART Failures

By FRANK LA PIERRE

A little publicized report issued last month by the Bay Area Rapid Transit District's engineering firm — Parsons Brinckerhoff-Tudor-Bechtel — disputes charges leveled against them by State Legislative Analyst A. Alan Post.

The PBTB report, presented on April 4 by John P. Buehler, chairman of the engineering company, states the reason for many of BART's failures can be attributed to political expediency in getting the system in operation and the fact the trains do not run frequently enough.

According to Buehler, the controversial Westinghouse ATC system, which is blamed for holding up transit service, would work under "normal operation conditions." But trains are not running frequent enough to allow wheel contact with tracks. This would "clear the way for the required electronic signals," Buehler said he was told by Westinghouse.

"Whether this reasoning from Westinghouse is true or not will be left up to the Public Utilities Commission (PUC), Buehler said.

"We are not prepared to accept or reject the Westinghouse system as of today," he said, "because it has never been fully tested."

Had revenue service been postponed until all necessary tests were completed, time might have been saved in attaining the ultimate overall systems operation, Buehler told the BART directors during the April meeting.

"But there is no use speculating on what might have been," he said.

Buehler recalled the "pressures of a couple of years ago" when Bay Area taxpayers and local politicians demanded the system get into operation.

"The President of the United States was about to visit us," Buehler said.

As a consequence of this pressure it was decided to set the target date for beginning BART operations in Sept. 1972.

The "manual block system" was employed to run the trains between stations, rather than the full Westinghouse automated control systems.

"This is the situation under which the combination of criticism and pressure brought about the decision to install a back-up system. The resulting controversy really boils down to whether this assurance is a necessity or is simply desirable.

"In either case, it should be made clear that it will not produce an absolute failsafe system... there is no such thing as a completely failsafe system," Buehler said.

The obstacles confronting the system are monumental, it was explained.

Trains coming through the Trans-Bay tube, from the south, north and east do not "merge" in the East Bay, they actually "converge," adding to the danger of human error in operation.

This factor has not yet been eliminated from cars, trains, planes or space travel, the latter having the most sophisticated gear available, BART directors were told.

If the system circled the Bay Area in a steady loop — much like those systems employed in other areas — there would be no automatic switchover problem, the PBTB chairman said.

Buehler said his company, as consultants to BART, had delivered "what we promised you as our original concept — the finest mass transportation system in the world."

Survey Claims SM County Residents Want BART

San Mateo County residents are so hungry for mass transit they would favor extension of Bay Area Rapid Transit (BART) service into the county, despite the system's multitude of problems.

This contention is reported in a survey of county voters authorized by Supervisor Gerald F. Day, seeking to determine the concerns and desires uppermost in the public mind.

Bob Thyken, a doctoral candidate in political science at the University of North Carolina, who conducted the survey, said at a press conference Friday that "San Mateo County residents want mass transit, and they want it now."

"And despite all the unfavorable publicity given to BART due to its startup woes, the public, ranging from 80 per cent in the south and central area, to 46 per cent in the north, would like to see BART extended into this county."

Thyken said this by no means reveals "a love affair" between the local public and the BART, but it points to the "public hunger for transportation, and is convincing evidence that the mass movement of people should be a top priority item for the supervisors."

Day, who is seeking reelection June 4, said the results of the survey concerning BART were "a great surprise to me and I'm sure will be a great surprise to others. It may be different story concerning acceptance of BART when there is money attached to it."

Day financed the survey from his campaign funds. Thyken noted that the survey showed seven basic issues — transportation, medical care, taxes, police protection, streets, parks, and development of the county.

However, he reported, the political rhetoric in the upcoming primary election "has not turned too many people on." Only 45 per cent of the electorate plans to vote according to results of the survey.

Thyken said that a total of 360 registered voters residing in 60 selected precincts throughout the county were personally interviewed during the last week of April and first week of May.

Validity of BART Survey Questioned

Edward Bacciocco, candidate for San Mateo County Board of Supervisors questioned the validity of a survey released by his incumbent opponent, Ged Day, that stated that the majority of San Mateo County residents want BART extended into San Mateo.

DC Scouts Honor Post Columnist

Louanne Heath, columnist for the North County Post, was honored Tuesday by the Daly City Girl Scout Association at their annual Adult Awards Luncheon at the Ranch Inn, Serramonte.

Mrs. Heath was honored "for her guiding force in people to people understanding." The award was presented by the San Francisco Bay Council, through the Daly City Girl Scout Association, by Roz Morino, Daly City Scout press representative.

Mrs. Heath was cited for her continued interpretation of the philosophy of Scouting to the community. "For Girl Scouting, she's helped honor retirees, recruit new leaders and solidify support for special events and projects," read her award in part. The board Certificate of Appreciation honored her for "trying to make this a better world for everyone."

"The incumbent Mr. Day, has always wanted BART extended into San Mateo County and has always tried to block any attempt to upgrade Southern Pacific or establish a county-wide bus system," Bacciocco said.

"Therefore it comes as no surprise that the public relations firm that is handling my opponent's campaign also has produced a survey that strongly supports his position," he said.

Bacciocco went on to say that "when people are told the truth that BART would cost $700 million, (according to a 1972 study) take over 10 years to build and only serve the bayside of the county, they will realize that BART is impractical at this time."

"We should react to our transportation problems in gradual, fiscally responsible stages. We should not consider BART until feeder buses, which are the current prime necessity, and an upgraded Southern Pacific have proven themselves insufficient to meet our transit requirements," the candidate said.

"Instead we are told that the board of supervisors has allowed County Engineer Sid Cantwell to begin negotiations to extend BART into San Mateo County," Bacciocco said.

Chamber Hears Talk On Acupuncture

Members of the Pacifica Chamber of Commerce heard John L. Hays of the West Coast Medical Group tell how acupuncture has been providing relief to 80 per cent of his patients.

He indicated that the ancient Chinese art may not affect basic cures of various ailments but it does provide symptomatic relief, enabling arthritic-ridden persons to move about and giving relief to sufferers of migraine headaches.

Treatment also has been successfully given to nerve deafness, and to habit problems such as alcoholism, drug and tobacco addiction, and weight control.

Needles are inserted into strategic parts of the body which correspond to nerve endings, where they serve the function of stimulating the life flow.

According to their philosophy, Eastern practitioners of acupuncture can cure anything, and they can explain exactly how it is done. Under its Western philosophy, however, Hays explained, the West Coast Medical Group is engaged in research to find out what can be cured. Furthermore, he admitted that his group really does not understand how acupuncture works — but it does work.

California's First Secret Election

Announcer: Tonight our weekly show, "The Inmates Run The Institution," brings you an explanation of what happened in last week's election. We have invited Joe Mentwell, political activist, long identified as a sponsor of initiative measures. His most recent success was his participation in passage of The Political Reform Act of 1974, known that year as Proposition 9. Last Tuesday's general election is the first to have operated under its provision. Tell us, Joe, what did you think of the election?

A. Well, I must admit that I was surprised by some of the results.

Q. How did the new law work?

A. Perfectly, there can be no question that it changed the nature of California politics.

Q. What about the fact that this fall's election experienced the lowest turnout in history?

A. Not a bad thing at all. Under the new law the state parties only had one cent per member of the voting population. This wasn't enough to allow their usual manipulation of the voters.

Q. Didn't the candidates offer to help their parties?

A. They were short of funds too. What little they had they blew on TV ads.

Q. What about billboards, radio and newspaper ads, and mail pieces?

A. There weren't any of those awful things. Candidates for governor were limited to nine cents multiplied by the state's voting population, and the rest of the statewide candidates only had three cents per head. With these limitations it was impossible for them even to send one statewide mailer explaining their views.

Q. Do you really approve of an election in which only half as many persons voted as compared with other gubernatorial elections?

A. Certainly. Those who voted cared. We are well rid of the rest.

Q. What about our new state officials — what do you think of them?

A. Well, it is a bit upsetting that the governor and other state constitutional officers come from publishing families.

Q. Yes, how did that happen?

A. Under the new rules only those who could attract editorial attention had a chance. In the primaries there were more than 60 running for statewide office, and there was no way for most of them to gain visibility.

Q. Didn't this new law really stifle free speech — isn't that what happened?

A. Oh no. They were all perfectly free to speak, it just happened that there was no one listening.

Q. They were shouting in an empty house?

A. They were free to speak to California's 20 million people, and nine million voters — oh, I should say, four and a half million voters.

Q. Who heard them?

A. Those citizens who attended forums and went to meetings.

Q. But isn't that a small, small part of the population?

A. Yes, more should have paid attention.

Q. Is there any way this can be improved?

A. My purpose is to see that our elections are immaculate, not in stirring up a lot of sleepy voters.

Q. Some have called this California's first secret election — what do you have to say about that?

A. So it goes.

Q. Would you care to comment on the complaints of Common Cause that its campaign against the oil drilling measure couldn't start until three weeks before election day?

A. Sour grapes. The law provides that the Fair Political Practices Commission could wait until 21 days before the election to approve spending in excess of $10,000 by any committee. Because of all the red tape, and the battle between commission members, earlier action was impossible.

Q. Why didn't Proposition 9 include some reasonable provision for communication? Why wasn't some means of public support assured?

A. The proposition was long enough — 20 thousand words. No one but a madman would have added a single sentence.

Q. Couldn't some things have been eliminated to make room for free speech provisions?

A. Yes, I must agree that the portions of the initiative that covered disclosure, conflicts of interest, the ballot pamphlet, and auditing enforcement really didn't change then existing law all that much. They could have been left out, but if that had been done, the proposition might never have passed.

Q. Let's go back to the winners. Members of the Chandler, Knowland, de Young and McClatchy families won all of the statewide races — what about that?

A. It does seem that the major media all supported the same candidates.

Q. And wasn't the real campaign carried on exclusively in editorials?

A. True enough. We're going to have to control editorials.

Q. How?

A. I am not certain. It appears impossible as a practical matter to change Proposition 9. Its amendment provisions are too difficult, and, my organization isn't going to propose any initiatives now that 25 cents a head is the limit for securing signatures. What's more, you can be certain that we're not going to get involved in any statewide campaign in which we are limited to eight cents per member of the voting population or even less. We're not fools.

Q. Mr. Mentwell, it appears that Proposition 9 has created an unbelievable mess of California politics. What were you thinking of in 1974?

A. We meant well.

Catholic Social Service

They Help Families

By JOHN HORGAN

William Freni has this recurring nightmare: He and his staff have services to offer the community but no way to get their message out to the people.

That isn't as far-fetched as it might sound. Freni, San Mateo County director of Catholic Social Service, has no advertising budget at all. Primarily, he relies on word of mouth to spread information about his organization, one of a host of such services in this county.

Misconceptions about Catholic Social Service abound.

"If you talked to every Catholic in the county," Freni muses, "you would get opinions about us that have little relation to reality at all."

In this area, Catholic Social Service has concentrated on family problems, help for Spanish-speaking persons, programs for senior citizens and the handicapped.

The major thrust of CSS is directed at the family.

Freni himself is a counselor in the organization's San Mateo office.

On the Coastside, where Spanish-speaking migrant workers work the fields in season, CSS is diligently endeavoring to improve conditions there.

"We are doing it in a quiet way," Freni explains. "We aren't out to start a fight with anyone. We think we can help by going about it in a positive, constructive manner. In the long run, everyone will come out better this way."

In that regard, CSS is a non-political arm of the Catholic Church, taking no sides except those obvious ones which better the lot of the people.

Freni downplays the notion of any activist role for his staff. They are worried about individuals, not causes.

In that regard, it is Freni's aim to make the programs and varied personnel of CSS known to the public.

"We want to serve more people," he says. "But, for some of us, that idea is a little scary. If we had more people coming to us for help, then we'd have to add more staff. But that's all right with me. We'd rather face the problem of having too many people."

Freni points out that "The potential for service here is much greater than what we are doing."

Currently, the CSS staff in this county see several hundred people per month. Often, people are referred to other service agencies in the county.

The agency's budget is small in comparison to federal welfare budgets and certain state and county programs.

For the coming fiscal year 1974-75, the CSS budget totals only $218,000.

CSS has three offices in this county. They are located at 6705 Mission St. in Daly City, 403—8th Ave.

in Menlo Park and 20 N. San Mateo Drive in San Mateo.

CSS is listed in the Yellow Pages. But, then, so are 62 other agencies which deal in social welfare services in this county.

Freni offers that every effort is being made to avoid any possible duplication of services.

However, he also allows that, "I don't know of any community which has an overabundance of human service agencies."

The Church itself is aware of the need to continue CSS.

This Sunday is the day for the Archdiocese of San Francisco's annual charities appeal. Funds gained from collections all over the archdiocese go towards supporting CSS.

The organization also receives monies from the United Bay Area Crusade and some allocations from the federal government.

But, in the main, it is the Catholic layman who supports CSS.

Freni is hopeful that the word about the agency has spread far enough to continue that support.

Building Violations At Hillcrest

Score one for the building inspector.

Ordered to attend adult driving classes at the Hillcrest Juvenile Home just west of San Mateo, Robert Griffiths of San Francisco found some violations of his own at the San Mateo County facility.

Griffiths, who works as a building inspector in Pacifica, discovered no fewer than 16 building code violations at Hillcrest last month as he attempted to attend his driving classes.

Griffiths says there were so many people in a main meeting room last month that people were sitting in the aisles. The exits were blocked too.

He complains that, "I asked the instructor to stop the class so I could bring out these hazards, but I was escorted from the building."

"The long-range answer," Chief Probation Officer Loren Beckley says, "is to get the traffic school completely out of there."

He says plans are afoot to remove those classes and shift them to municipal court facilities in San Mateo.

Beckley says that a fire marshal confirmed much of what Griffiths had alleged about Hillcrest.

South City's Junior Achievement

Teaching Students the Principles of Business

By JACK BIK

Four South San Francisco corporations soon will be going out of business but no one seems alarmed over the prospect.

You won't find their names on the Big Board — or even on the Over the Counter listings. Yet, they all seem to have enjoyed a successful year.

The four companies go by the weird names of Cork-Off Incorporated, Lite-A-Nite, Waxy Wicks and Growing Glass. Not one corporation official or director is over 18 years of age.

They are part of the Junior Achievement movement — designed to teach high school aged youth the principles of business organization by actually operating real businesses.

Junior Achievement members can be found these days every Monday and Wednesday nights at the South San Francisco Boys Club.

Earlier in the year, the members could be seen gathered around work tables assembling their products. Now, they are liquidating their inventory. One of their favorite methods is to auction off their unsold items.

Junior Achievement companies usually organize at the beginning of the school year. Students whose sole business background has been games such as Monopoly, or in selling newspapers, find themselves busily organizing corporations.

They issue stock, set up books, and follow — on a smaller scale — the regulations of a big corporation. They even pay wages, commissions, officer salaries and taxes. The taxes, for the most part, are not imposed by the state or federal government — but are assessed by Junior Achievement, and donated to its scholarship fund. Guiding the youths are adviser teams from local businesses.

Junior Achievement, on the North Peninsula, started in 1972. Before that, United Air Lines sponsored a limited program at Mangolia School. In 1972, however, local businessman Bob Leland, director of community service for the South San Francisco Rotary Club, contacted the J.A. Bay Area

Office, and a new program was started for South San Francisco.

The Boys Club remodeled a section of its building to accommodate three JA companies per evening. Steve and Norm Hyndig contributed the labor from their construction firm, and several other Rotarians contributed the money for materials. UAL contributed labor and material to build equipment and furnishings.

By fall of 1973, the program was expanded to four JA companies, aided by teams from UAL, TWA, Golden Gate Casket Co. (Leland's firm), as well as the local Rotary and Kiwanis clubs as sponsors.

One of the first key decisions of a company is: What shall we make?

The Lite-A-Nite Co., headed by Pres. Marianne Vetter, decided to produce an all purpose safety kit consisting of a first aid kit and two chemical flares. The kit is packaged in a wooden box manufactured by the Achievers. Advising the highly successful group is a team of four UAL executives representing management, sales, accounting and production.

Typically, a company first will decide on how much capital it needs to start. It will then issue whatever stock it needs. For instance, if the students need $125, they will issue 125 shares, which they will sell to their teachers, parents, sponsoring clubs — or simply door to door. The only ones who may not buy any stock are the students organizing the company.

After the product is manufactured and sold, the company decides to dissolve. Hopefully, after paying wages, commission, taxes, raw material costs and other business expenses, Achievers will be able to return the dollar per share to the stockholders, with perhaps a dime or two for dividends.

There have been some cases in which the company has been successful enough to have made everyone involved quite a mint — such as one firm that put out a wine rack whose sales spread like a prairie fire.

Achievers are looking forward to the annual awards banquet at the Hilton Hotel in San Francisco, May 30. At that time, awards will be given for salesmanship best product, and many other talents expressed. However, the best award is the education of the students, themselves, who learn the elements of business enterprise that made their country great.

Sponsors of the companies are now planning for this fall's program when they hope to expand the program to six firms. They need more businesses, and service clubs, however, for sponsors to guide the eager youngsters who make up Junior Achievement.

JUNIOR ACHIEVER Sue Tucker gets some good pointers when it comes to balancing the books of Cork-Off Incorporated. Her adviser is Bob Rankin, manager of Barclay's Bank in South San Francisco (Steve Haag Photos)

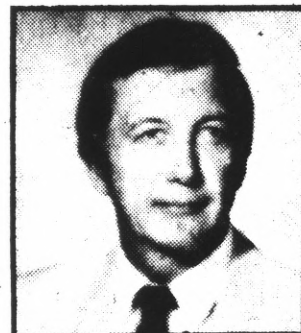

JIM CALLAHAN of the South San Francisco Boys Club watches as Joe Dalli, top salesman of Cork-Off Company, makes another of those bulletin boards which he has been so successful at selling.

Disruptive Children

JESD Keeps Opportunity Classes

Three opportunity classes came close to being cut out of the Jefferson Elementary School District (JESD) budget for 1974-75, Wednesday night, but teacher comments convinced trustees to retain the program.

The classes are offered at Benjamin Franklin, Colma Intermediate and at Abraham Lincoln, in the fourth, fifth and sixth grades.

The children act impulsively, are insubordinate and very disruptive, according to Lisa Kroeber, teacher at Lincoln.

"For many of them, it's their last chance," she said.

"Some were on their way out of the school system before they came into the program."

She explained that these students "have a lot of characteristics that separate them from normal school children."

"My guess is that they don't like themselves — don't think they're worth anything," she said.

Miss Kroeber said that success to some of the children is stealing and not getting caught.

"They have been failing; it's their pattern, and they can't control themselves," she said.

"They have no tolerance and are unpredictable. There is no way of telling what's going to set them off."

"The program has offered an intervention," she said,

"to help them learn to control and respect themselves."

"The program tries to give them something to trust, and they are starting to really try to go somewhere," Miss Kroeber said.

She said "It is imperative" that the board retain the program. She was supported by Steve Howe, teacher at Colma Intermediate.

He said, "Of all the children who started in September, nearly all have been integrated back into the regular school program."

Howe teaches 14 of the total 30 students enrolled in the program and indicated that many of his pupils participate in a normal schedule of classes for five or six periods each day.

He added that in about two weeks, four more students will make a similar transition.

It was pointed out that no feasible alternatives exist.

Lowell Jennings, director of guidance, said that mental health programs do deal with such problems, but only when related to "quiet children."

If disruptive children are allowed to remain in a normal school situation, and do not respond to authority, the only other alternative is expulsion, according to the principal of Daniel Webster School.

He said that this is implemented as a last resort, to protect the other children.

JESD Board Rescinds Sabbatical Leaves

Jefferson Elementary School District (JESD) trustees rescinded district-funded sabbatical leaves for 1974-75.

Supt. Keith Breon said, "I have a difficult time using district funds to place people on sabbatical leaves," and he recommended that leaves "not be granted as far as being funded."

He said the Certificated Employees Council has indicated that "the district should come up with some kind of funds for these leaves."

Breon pointed out, however, that the JESD is not required to do so by law.

"We have a policy which says the board 'may' grant sabbatical leaves," he said, and the limitation is two per cent of the budget.

"Maybe it can be put into the category 'if funds become available,'" he said,

"but, I hate to give these people false hopes."

Trustee Al Schwarzbach indicated that "in all fairness," the board should carry out the recommendation, and "with regret" he seconded Trustee David Parker's motion to discontinue sabbatical funding.

The board also voted to retain the district's student accident insurance program.

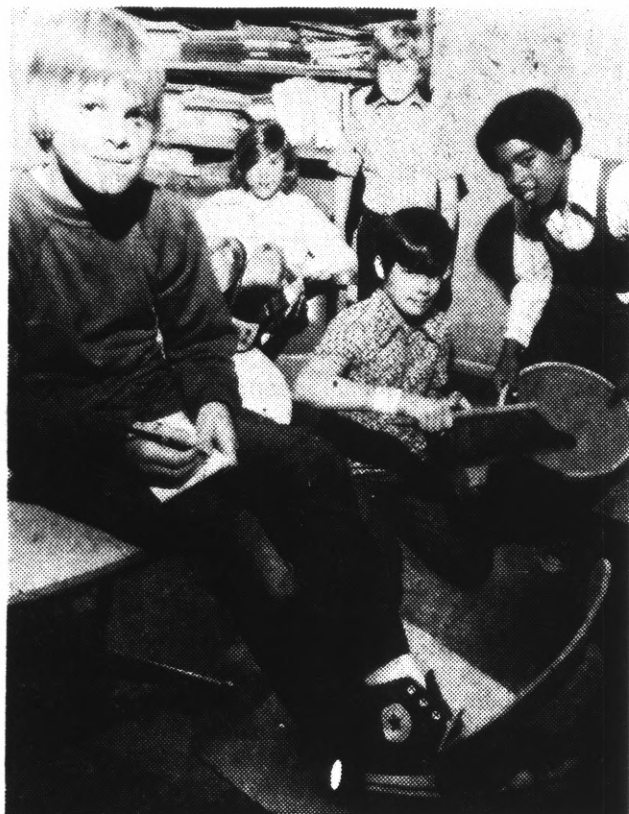

According to administrative assistant John Lynch, the JESD has employed the insurance for about 10 years, and the Myer Stevens Company is offering the same premiums as last year.

Lynch explained that the program is offered on a volunteer basis for one year to all students.

"Seventh and eighth grade students who participate in inter-scholastic activities are required to purchase this insurance or show proof of adequate coverage elsewhere in order to comply with education code requirements," he said.

He noted that the athletic program is paid for by the district for the total number of participating students.

Oroweat Told To Muffle Noise

The South San Francisco Planning Commission gave the Oroweat Baking Co. until June 25 to come up with a feasible plan to conceal its flour storage tanks and muffle machinery noise.

Company representatives claimed they were unaware of the disturbances caused by the plant's operation, described by a neighbor as sounding "worse than some of those jets from the airport."

According to City Planner Neal Martin, this matter was before the commission as a review of the existing use permit and noncompliance of conditions.

He recommended Oroweat retain a sound consultant to design an appropriate sound proof screening around the tanks, so that sound measured at the back of the property should not exceed 45 decibels on the A rating at any time.

Appearance of the four, 38-foot high storage tanks also poses a problem, and four additional conditions were placed on the existing use permit to solve it.

According to Martin, these conditions require the replacement of the poplar trees in front of two of the tanks with Monterey pines, and that the plant be repainted to blend with the surroundings.

Noise abatement seemed to be the major concern of residents living near the bakery.

They claimed that, although it is "relatively quiet now," there are certain periods during the year when the noise is more intense than usual. It was noted that the disturbance continued for 12 consecutive days during Easter and for 30 days at Christmas.

One man said he lodged three complaints with local police during the past year, but the company denied any knowledge of this.

"I am puzzled with the noise appearing at some times and not at others," a company man said.

"Obviously, something is happening at specific times that we have not detected."

In the staff's recommendation to construct baffles to reduce the noise, Zoning Administrator William Costanzo said, "We are talking about something eight to 10 feet high, depending on where the noise is coming from."

He indicated these screens also could serve to block the visibility of the tanks.

Costanzo said, however, "It would be better to eliminate the problem at the source, than to build another problem into it."

Christensen said he was agreeable with the staff's recommendations. "We can surely try to get the level (of noise) down to as practically low or bearable as possible," he said.

He indicated that working with the staff and the neighbors "would also lend some light."

Commissioner Roberta Teglia suggested postponement of a decision "until the Oroweat people can find out what is causing the noise, what they can do about it and how long it will take."

The commission accepted Martin's proposal to continue the matter to the June 25 meeting by unanimous vote.

Reception Set For Minshew

Sheriff candidate Harland Minshew will be present at a reception in his honor to be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Italo Rinaldi, 107 Camella Drive, Daly City, June 1 from 2 to 5 p.m.

The reception, sponsored by the Friends of Harland Minshew, is open to the public.

All citizens are invited to stop by and speak with Minshew about his proposal for a North County sheriff's substation and other issues of concern.

'High Degree of Loneliness'

Women's Suicide Rate on the Rise

By JOHN HORGAN

Women are closing in on men in a number of fields. Breakthroughs for females are being made in a range of formerly male bastions.

Including suicides.

In the past, the rate of suicides among men has run about three to four times that of women.

But that is changing dramatically.

Today, the ratio is less than two women for every one man who kills himself.

Is this a sign of the times? Charlotte Ross, director of the Suicide Prevention Center of San Mateo County, thinks it might be.

"Women are becoming more involved outside the family," she says. "They are increasingly entering the working arena. Their drive for success and recognition has increased pressures and opened more possibilities for failure."

She thinks there may be a link between the current drive for women's liberation and the rise in suicides among females.

"In precisely those arenas where liberated women are making the most progress, the male-female suicide ratio moves toward equality," she points out.

Fortunately, the services that are provided by the San Mateo County center can assist those women — and men — who feel driven to take their own lives.

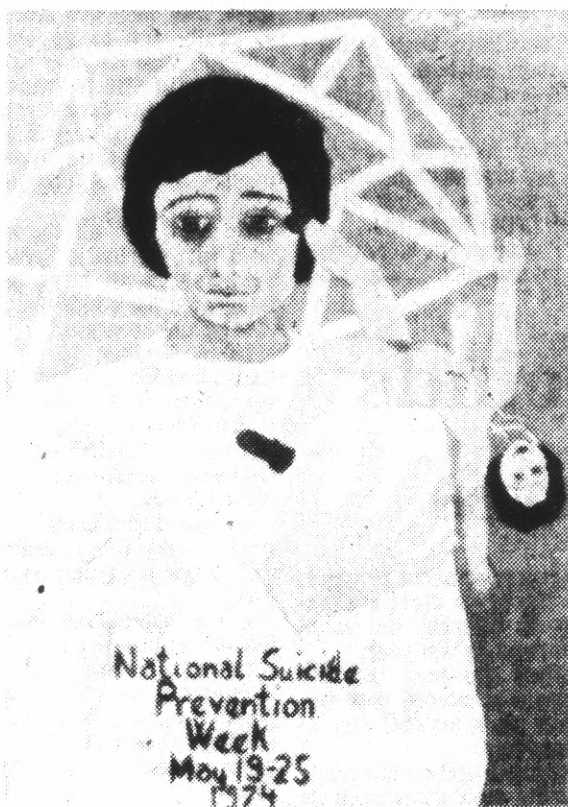

The center, now in its eighth year of operation here, fields about 1,000 telephone calls per month.

About one-quarter of the calls are regarded as potential emergencies.

And, with the beginning of National Suicide Prevention Week this Sunday, a new program is being implemented in this county for the first time.

Called the Befrienders Program, it aims to do just what that name implies: To help someone in trouble by simply being a friend.

"There are times when people need a friend,"

Mrs. Ross says, "So, we provide a person who is very good at that. They get to know the troubled person, go shopping with her (or him) and help her at best they can."

The essence of this service is to assist people in their fight to deal with loneliness.

"Yes, there is a very high suicide rate in this county," Mrs. Ross admits. "But there is also a high degree of loneliness too. Many people live their lives in extreme loneliness. We'd like to do something about that."

Another aspect of the program involves a drop-in center at the suicide prevention facility itself at 274 W. 20th Ave. in San Mateo. The drop-in center is open now from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day of the work week for persons who desire to come in to personally talk over their depressions and problems.

"For a lot of people," Mrs. Ross allows, "a telephone call just isn't enough."

Officials of the local center have also learned that the telephone switchboard has to be a 24-hour affair. A limited time period won't do.

"How would you feel if you needed help from our office at 3 in the morning and all you got was a recording," Mrs. Ross asks.

That was one of the items which emerged from a recent meeting of the American Association of Suicidology which was held in Atlantic Beach, Fla.

Another is that many centers across the nation ought to be accredited officially by the association.

The association is also interested in promoting information about the issue of suicide and its prevention. Hence, the emphasis this coming week on the topic.

"A key to this whole thing is understanding," Mrs. Ross says. "People who threaten suicide are not necessarily crazy. They aren't threatening something which is illegal (although suicide is still illegal in seven states, though not California) and, as far as religions are concerned, it isn't a sin either."

To bolster her case, Mrs. Ross has co-authored a book on the subject of suicide prevention centers.

Titled "Standards for Suicide Prevention Crisis Centers," it will be available soon.

National Suicide Prevention Week will last through May 25.

An evening of Philippine culture will be presented by the Friends of the Daly City Library during that organization's annual meeting to be held tonight.

Mrs. Michael Daw, meeting chairwoman, and her assistant, Mrs. James Hough, have arranged for the appearance of the Filipino-American Association of Northern San Mateo county's song and dance group and the participation of the Pagasa choir of St. Patrick's Church.

Mrs. Muriel Erickson, a former resident of the Philippines, is exhibit chairwoman. A documentary film dealing with the islands will be shown during the program.

Members of the Jefferson High School Filipino Club, working with Mrs. Elverna Sunnell, hospitality chairman, will provide native desserts to be served during the social hour following the program.

The evening's agenda includes a brief business meeting and the election of officers for the fall.

Mrs. Emmett B. Tierney, outgoing president, will preside at the meeting which will be held in the New Westlake Park Club house, beginning at 7 p.m. Guests as well as members of the local Friends of the Library unit are invited to attend. No reservations are necessary.

THE DAUGHTERS of Charity will honor the volunteers who serve in the Mary's Help Hospital Guild at the annual installation breakfast and awards presentation on Friday morning.

Mrs. Jerry Stringer, publicity chairwoman, notes that the morning will begin with Mass at 9 a.m. in the hospital chapel. The breakfast will follow at 10:15 a.m. in the hospital solarium.

Mrs. Mary McCoy, director of volunteer services at Mary's Help, will accept calls for reservations from members and their guests who call her at 992-4000.

Mrs. Fran Gaffigan, incoming president, will receive the president's gavel from retiring prexy Mrs. Mary Short.

FORMER COMMUNITY Service Librarian for the Daly City Libraries, Edward Cavallini, was the honored guest at a farewell luncheon hosted by Dr. and Mrs. Vinton Stratton.

Cavallini, who won the respect and admiration of his co-workers and the community during the three years he worked in the local system, has left this area to assume a post with more administrative responsibility in the library system near his southern peninsula home.

Samuel Chandler, director of the Daly City Library system, spoke briefly and commended Cavallini for his contributions to the city.

"I am sure I speak for the Library Board and the Library staff when I say Ed Cavallini did an excellent job for the City of Daly City," Chandler said.

Among those joining the Strattons in their tribute to Cavallini were Mrs. Kenneth Bowers, Book Power Bus; Mrs. James Hough, Latino program; and Robert Kearney, librarian. Mrs. Stratton is in charge of the Library's shut-in program.

ADULT LEADERS of the San Francisco Bay Council, Daly City area Girl Scouts, will gather today at noon in the Ranch Inn to honor volunteers and present awards for outstanding service to the scouting program in this area.

Mrs. Grace Winters has been chairing the luncheon and Mrs. Caroline Futrell has been handling the reservations.

MEMBERS of the Fifty Plus Club are getting their bags ready to travel again.

June 14, 38 seniors will board a bus headed northward into the North West Cascades and the Skagit River country on the way to the Expo 74 in Spokane.

Two reunions on tap for the day just ahead. The members of the graduating classes of spring and fall 1953 from Balboa High School will be meeting June 1 in the Elk's Club in San Mateo. Call Ed Nevius, 333-2777 or Joe McMillan 408-267-3777 for information or reservations.

This Friday evening the spring and fall classes of 1944 will renew old friendships in a Balboa reunion to be held in the Machinists hall in Burlingame.

HAVE YOU EVER heard of a group called the Involvement Corps? The non-profit organization was formed in Palo Alto in 1968 and it will organize corporate employees into groups called "Task Forces" and then assist each task force in selecting a community project to work with.

A few weeks ago a task force was organized at the Foremost-McKesson plant and the Friends Outside program was selected by the newly evolved involvement task force, as the area it would concern itself with during the months ahead.

Barbara Abrams is the chairwoman for the Foremost-McKesson task force and she has been responsible for the work that group has been doing with the children of prisoners. To date the unit has helped stage an Easter egg hunt and has taken charge of a huge picnic at Angel Island.

According to Mrs. Louise Enberg, executive director of the San Francisco Bay Area Friends Outside, the two groups are looking forward to a long and mutually satisfying association.

MRS. JAY GUERRERO of Serramonte has announced that she again will serve as Director of the Vacation Church School program at Lakeside Presbyterian Church in San Francisco.

Classes for children five years old through sixth grade will be in session each day between 9 a.m. and noon starting on June 17 and running through June 28.

Additional information about the school may be obtained by calling Mrs. John Modrosen at 588-5044 or 586-8833 any day between 9 a.m. and noon.

The Regularity of Remodeling Schemes

By LORENE BEASLEY
Editor of BBB Barometer

Remodeling schemes are as regular as spring blossoms. A fast talking salesman, calling himself the advertising director or sales manager of a large remodeling firm calls on a homeowner. He compliments the "beautiful home" and the "lovely neighborhood" of the homeowner. Then comes the "deal of a lifetime." The job of residing the home with a brand-name aluminum won't cost a nickel if the owner will allow it to be used as a model for "before and after" photos which will be used in promotional advertising.

It all sounds great but the catch lies in the "small formalities." The first formality is utmost secrecy. This is required, the homeowner is told, to prevent competing manufacturers from flocking into the neighborhood. The other requirement is to sign a release so that the pictures can be used in advertising.

This racket is well-known to "Better Business Bureaus." The "utmost secrecy" routine is to insure that the Better Business Bureau or a consumer protection agency does not find out about the shady deal. The "release" turns out to be a sales contract featuring a grossly inflated price for the siding.

A new FTC rule provides an "out" of a signed contract with the door-to-door salesman if the consumer acts quickly. Effective June 7, the FTC requires the salesman to attach a "Notice of Cancellation" form to the contract. It states that the person who signs a contract has the right to cancel the transaction, without penalty, if a written, signed and dated notice of cancellation is sent to the company within three business days of signing the contract.

However, the safest rule is not to be pressured into any contract. Buy what you want, but know what you are buying and who is selling it.

The following rules should be followed if you are approached by a door-to-door salesman: ask the salesman for his business card; if you do not recognize the company, check the phone book or call your BBB or another reliable source; ask the salesman for names of other customers in the area and for a bank reference; insist the salesman put all his promises in writing and sign the paper on which they appear; take your time, and read all papers you are asked to sign; make sure all blanks are filled in or marked "not applicable"; check to see if a "notice of cancellation" is attached to the contract as required by law; do not pay cash in advance. If a deposit is required, make the check out to the company, not the salesman, and get a signed receipt.

LOOKING OVER PLANS for the annual meeting of the Friends of the Daly City Library to be held tonight at 7:30 p.m. at the new Westlake Clubhouse are (from left) Mrs. George Day, Mrs. Michael Daw, program chairwoman, Mrs. Marcelino Enriquez and Mrs. Cel Alhambra. A Philippine cultural program will highlight the meeting, which is being held in cooperation with the Filipino-American Association of Northern San Mateo County. ## Samuel Chandler 'What's in This Stuff?'

For something that is different, read "What's In This Stuff" in the June 1974 issue of "Esquire."

Observing that no one in the mid-seventies has any idea of what's going on, everyone, therefore, can "shoot his mouth off" with authority on such important issues as what are the ingredients that secretly lurk inside foods that are consumed by hundreds of Americans.

To discuss this question, "Esquire" formed a panel of expert palates and supplied them with samples of "our most popular foods."

What's in Coca-Cola and what's in Pepsi Cola? James Beard found in both products "an ungodly sweetness" and wrote "And when I think that some people cook with them I am astounded. I'll take plain soda any day."

Ray Andries de Groot found that "Coke contains a very finely ground orange zest, while Pepsi contains a substantial lemon zest." He notes that "Coke has a subtle flavor of No. 1 Grade Pennzoi" and of the bitter-nutty taste of a fly that lit on his lip after being swatted by an oily hand. Meanwhile Waverly Root tasted the carbonated water in Coca-Cola and caramel color, phosphoric acid, natural flavorings and caffeine. James Villas discovered benzoate and cherry extract in both drinks. He writes that his favorite drink is a combination of cranberry and molasses.

"Esquire's" next important issue is what's that taste in the sauce of McDonald's Big Mac? Beard found it to be both sweet and sour. "This comes from the sweet pickle that is added to the mayonnaise and sugar in the base and the vinegar that is put in to balance the sweetness."

De Groot tasted the Big Mac sauce at various times during the day and while in various moods and found in it a taste of higher quality than that found in the allegedly larger hamburgers it accompanies. Root found that McDonald's sauce to be "Miracle Whip in spades." Villas wrote that when tasted by itself the sauce was "absolutely dreadful — incredibly heavy, full of tough pickle skins (which are probably part of a relish), and not unlike eating flavored watery flour."

It is not likely that any of the panel will be found eating with Colonel Sanders. Beard found the taste of Kentucky Fried Chicken "ranging from crisp and really quite acceptable to a slimy, slick batter that slides off, leaving a very disagreeable looking piece of chicken," yet, "it turns out to be far better than much of the fried chicken served in restaurants."

Root says there is a taste in Colonel Sanders product that surprises him, — it tastes like chicken. "A good many things taste like chicken except, nowadays, chicken, which tastes like damp cardboard." Villas, being a Southerner, thinks it unfair to ask him to appraise "this pressure-cooked, soft, unorthodox variety of fried chicken." De Groot finds Colonel Sanders chicken coated with a batter containing rosemary, savory, tarragon, thyme, pepper, turmeric, and cinnamon. The other ingredients he can not name.

From Chicken, Big Mac sauce, and Coke, the panel turns to French dressing, Worcestershire sauce, tabasco sauce, Miracle Whip, Lawry's Seasoned Salt and Seasoned Pepper, Adolph's Instant Meat Tenderizer and Angostura Aromatic Bitters.

Bitters. Of the panels discussions of these products, the editor of Esquire writes they are pressing if irrelevant national matters. Irrelevant or not the discussion opens up a new world of conjecture — "What's in the stuff prepared for you to eat."

Scheduled for May 31-June 1 at the San Mateo County Fairgrounds, the two-day celebration of scouting will be built around the bicentennial theme of "Be Prepared for Life," according to General Chairman Alvin L. # Threat Posed to Day Care

By MICHELLE CARTER

Day care parents of San Mateo County are getting a collective pat on the back today from the county social services department.

A family picnic at the Burlingame Recreation Center is planned as a special gesture of thanks to the families for continuing to provide child care in their homes — a gesture to let them know that the county appreciates their services, even if Sacramento does not.

If the state government does appreciate the need for day care parents, and the need to increase their numbers, they have a peculiar way of showing it: Thanks to Assembly Bill 2262 which passed the legislature last fall, all day care parents licensed by the state are now in danger of being charged a $45 yearly licensing fee "that will produce sufficient revenue to recover the costs of licensure," according to the language of the bill.

In the past, couples interested in obtaining a day care license for their home were required to get an annual chest X-ray and to allow their homes to be inspected by county officials each year.

Now the law requires that the yearly application for a license or renewal of the license will be accompanied by a fee, and the local health and welfare department officials charged with supervising day care and foster homes (also affected by the law) are incensed.

To this date, officials of the state department of health are still debating about imposing the fee or waiving it, as the law will allow them to do. Hearings are planned next month in San Francisco to assess public opinion about the fee, and local officials are hoping for a loud outcry for the waiver.

If it is imposed, a great many day care parents have expressed the fear that they will be forced to quit because of financial hardship.

Forced to quit just when Caroline Scott, a social worker in the day care services of the county health and welfare department, is sending out urgent requests for more parents to join the program.

"We are now faced with a crucial shortage of family day care facilities in this area. We operate a referral service for day care resources from the community at large (as well as a service for welfare mothers), and many of these we can't fill at all.

"The shortage is especially critical for children under two" since only one child under two is permitted in each day care home (which may take in a total of six children minus the number of their own children under 16 years of age).

"There are a large number of single parents in this area because of the high divorce rate. And the single parent really has no alternative but to find day care facilities."

She added that without day care facilities some of these mothers would be forced onto welfare because they would not be able to keep their jobs.

Increasing the ranks of day care parents, when the possibility of a yearly fee looms large, is especially difficult when you consider the small amount day care parents are paid for their services. The going rate for a child over two years old is $5 a day for a nine to 10-hour day that can begin as early as 6:30 a.m. and may not end until 6:30 p.m. or 7 p.m.

Should the state director of health decide against the waiver, State Senator Alfred E. Alquist of San Jose also is offering another possible way out for day care parents through his SB 457 which would amend the Community Care Facilities Bill to exempt residential and day care facilities which are family homes providing care for six or fewer children.

Alquist's amendment has passed the Assembly and has been voted out of committee in the Senate and is awaiting a vote on the Senate floor.

However, passage by the legislature doesn't assure relief for day care parents. As noted by Warren Spencer, supervisor for the foster care program in the county, "the governor frequently vetoes this sort of bill."

"We never would have been in this mess if Sacramento wasn't so full of dumbbells. They have no idea of the frontline situation," Spencer continued.

"The Reagan administration is looking for every program to pay for itself. They see this as a money-making operation, but it's not. It's a public service. It should be encouraged, not discouraged."

Spencer believes the fees would have an even greater impact on foster parents than on day care parents.

NELL NORTON

Good morning, good cooks.

This column will be devoted to a delicious and most unusual entree. I have made Moussaka many times, always using eggplant as the vegetable. This recipe calls for artichoke with an egg sauce topping.

My friend, Helen Reeves who lives in San Francisco, gave me this recipe and I'm happy to share it with you good cooks.

MOUSSAKA-ARTICHOKE

- 2 Tablespoons butter
- 1 medium-sized onion, chopped
- 2 pounds ground lean lamb
- ¼ cup dry red wine or tomato juice
- 2 medium-sized tomatoes, peeled and chopped
- 2/3 cup chopped parsley
- ½ teaspoon each, pepper, cinnamon, nutmeg
- 1 teaspoon salt
- Egg Sauce (recipe below)
- 1 bag (10-oz.) frozen artichoke bottoms (crowns) or 1 (8-oz.) package frozen artichoke hearts
- 1 cup freshly shredded Parmesan cheese

In large frying pan, melt the two tablespoons butter. Sauté the one chopped onion and two pounds lamb over medium heat, breaking meat apart with a spoon, until meat loses redness. Add the half cup red wine (or tomato juice), two chopped tomatoes, two-thirds cup chopped parsley, one-half teaspoon each pepper, cinnamon and nutmeg and one teaspoon salt. Simmer uncovered, stirring occasionally, for about 35 minutes or until liquid evaporates. Remove from heat, skim off any extra fat and stir in three tablespoons egg sauce. Spread meat mixture in greased 9x13-inch baking pan.

Pour artichoke bottoms or hearts into a colander and run hot water over them until thawed; drain. Cut hearts into quarters. Press into meat. Spread remaining egg sauce over artichokes and sprinkle the cup Parmesan cheese over top. (At this point it can be refrigerated.)

Bake in 350-degree oven for 20 minutes or until heated through. (Bake in 350-degree oven about 50 minutes if refrigerated.)

Remove from oven and allow to stand about 10 minutes. Cut in squares to serve. This serves 9 to 12, depending on the appetites.

EGG SAUCE

- 3 eggs
- ½ teaspoon nutmeg
- 1 teaspoon salt
- ¼ cup butter
- ¼ cup flour
- 3 cups milk

Beat the three eggs with the eighth teaspoon nutmeg and one teaspoon salt; set aside.

Melt the fourth cup butter in saucepan and gradually stir in the fourth cup flour. Cook, stirring, until bubbly. Remove from heat and gradually stir in the three cups milk; cook and stir until mixture boils and thickens.

Slowly stir about one-third of the cream sauce into the beaten eggs. Then stir the egg mixture back into the hot cream sauce; cook about one minute. Remove from heat.

NOTE: I used the frozen artichokes when I made this recipe. Helen notes that she has used canned artichokes quite successfully. SO — you pays your money and you takes your choice.

"There's no margin of profit in this operation. I think we would lose half of our program right off."

He mentioned a survey taken in several other Bay Area counties (but was not permitted in San Mateo County) that indicated that only 2 per cent of the foster parents surveyed felt the fee would not impose a financial hardship on them.

"Foster care is a cheap way of maintaining kids not in their own homes. Too many families have disintegrated, and the kids will never return to their own homes. Many of them are in limbo, not in their own homes and not likely to return and still not available for adoption."

He pointed out that foster parents take over many of the high risk children that have emotional problems, physical problems and take them on for a 24-hour a day job. The reimbursement they receive from the county doesn't come close to covering the total cost of raising a child, he said.

"We're just hoping that the public clamor against this thing will be so great that it can't be ignored."

Our Public Libraries Are More Than Mere Book Depositories

By MIKE STRATTON
Daly City Friends of the Library

Libraries were once book depositories — storage houses for the printed word. Today, there is more to libraries than meets the eye. Not only do libraries now loan films, cassettes, art prints and records, but your own neighborhood library is an information center. If your library doesn't have the book or the answer you want, it can have it for you within hours or days.

Most of the public libraries in San Mateo County are members of the Peninsula Library System, which makes each library's collection and services available to the citizens of each member community. Each member library now has a teletype machine and this, combined with a messenger service between libraries, assures rapid access to over one million books and other materials within the system.

The Daly City Public Library sends out approximately 10 author-title requests daily to county headquarters in Belmont. There they are checked in the Union file and determination is made what library within the system has the book. That library is contacted and either sends or reserves the book.

If no library in the system has the book, the state library in Sacramento is contacted and informs us what library in the state has the title, and that library is sent an inter-library loan request for the book. We reach out all over California and even to the Library of Congress in Washington to fill our patrons' requests.

Subject requests for which no answer can be found within an individual library may go out to a library within the system with a subject specialty; i.e., San Mateo Public for business questions — Burlingame for books on literature and play scripts. The question can also be teletyped to the system's reference coordinator who will search for the answer herself or refer it to the Bay Area Reference Center in San Francisco with its wide research files and resources. This last month we received information for our patrons on how to operate a slaughter house, how to identify metals, how to start a tow truck business and how to get funds from foundations.

Two other services initiated by the Peninsula Library System and used daily in our patrons' behalf are the Union List of Periodicals and the Informa, an inventory of Community Resources.

The Union List of Periodicals list all magazines and newspapers held by libraries within the system and by the San Francisco Public Library. It will eventually include the holdings of the College of San Mateo and other institutions of higher learning in the county. Thus our patrons searching for a particular article in a particular magazine learn what library has the information and may even request that copywork be sent from the holding library.

Informa is, as its title states, an inventory of community services from chess clubs to aid to the disabled. Thus a patron can inquire at his local library and discover where to go for counseling for a blind child or where the nearest square dance club is located. These services are continuously updated and continuously useful.

The public libraries of the Peninsula Library System have recently joined another network, the Cooperative Information Network. This network covers Santa Clara and San Mateo counties and has over 150 participants including all types of libraries: private, public, city, county, school district, community college, hospital and special technical and business libraries.

A patron only has to ask a question at a member library, and by using the CIN directory with its subject index, the librarian can make inquiry directly to a library which might have the answer. Most of our inquiries to CIN libraries are by telephone, so we have immediately available the resources of such libraries as Ampex Corp., College of San Mateo, and The Count Educational Resource Center.

$2 Million Operation

Pacifica Asked to Approve Intel Plant

Dr. Robert N. Noyce, president of the Intel Corporation of Santa Clara, hosted Pacifica's civic leaders at a luncheon Saturday and asked them to give speedy approval to his firm to build a $2 million plant on Sharp Park Road.

As the occasion was also an official meeting of the Pacifica City Council, councilmen adopted a resolution asking the Planning Commission and Hillside Review Board to give all possible cooperation in moving the project through.

Present at the luncheon-meeting were members of the Planning Commission, Hillside Review Board, city staff, chamber of commerce, water district and junior college. The projected site is 10 acres of level land near the junior college, known as the Cozzolino quarry.

May Gee, HRB member and a veteran of the city's incorporation committee expressed the prevailing feeling most vividly when she burst out: "This is the most exciting piece of news that has come to us since our incorporation. We have tried for 17 years to attract industry to broaden out tax base. If we don't cooperate fully, we may as well kiss it goodbye. We shouldn't do a thing which would throw a monkey wrench into the project."

Noyce described the proposed plant as containing 50-60,000 square feet for the first phase and employing 500 workers, including 100 professionals. The plant will operate three shifts, so that no more than 150 cars will enter or exit the parking lot at any one time.

First addressing the group was Don Kobrin, vice president of Regis McKenna Inc., a Palo Alto advertising firm. He said his job was to find a site for Intel.

His specification was for a 10-acre site for a satellite plant, not too far to be serviced from Santa Clara, but far enough so that personnel trained by Intel would not be inclined to go off to work for any of the other three-dozen electronic plants in the Santa Clara Valley.

He had searched for a plant for Intel two years ago, and considered Pacifica. The city was rejected as too close to the San Andreas fault, however, and the site was located in Livermore.

The new plant will be of a different type, and the earthquake fault will not be as critical. It will be finishing, rather than a processing plant and so will not have noxious gases or other chemicals that could present a danger if a quake occurred.

Kobrin stressed the importance of speed in approving the plant, since the firm had to start producing by the end of the year. A parallel site, he added, is being considered, in an unnamed city, and the one involving the best cooperation with city officials will be chosen, he indicated.

He pointed out that under state law, a total of only 27 working days is required for approval of a project, including notices of hearings and various publications.

"We could be doing everything necessary within those 27 days," he said.

(Ordinarily, a development in Pacifica can take up to a year for final approval.)

Nick Gust, vice president of the Chamber of Commerce and former mayor, asked why the speed was so necessary.

"Do you ever get into a community and just follow the normal procedure?" he asked.

Kobrin replied by describing former site acquisitions for branch plants — indicating that they were all done on a rush basis. He and Noyce concluded by asking when they can have their assurance of acceptance.

City Manager Dave Thompson suggested that if the firm gave some assurance that the environmental effects would not be irreversible, perhaps some contract could be drawn up by the council. He noted that two councilmen ran for office on a platform of preservation of the environment.

The Hillside Review Board voted to hold a meeting at Oceana High School Tuesday night on the Intel plant proposal. Noyce and Kobrin agreed to meet with planning officials Monday. The Planning Commission, which does not have Intel on its agenda for its Monday night meeting, will nevertheless discuss how to facilitate the application on Monday.

Finally, Kobrin and Noyce were told that they would have to start filing necessary applications as soon as possible. Apparently, there are no plans for the building yet; Noyce only assured the group that the building would be especially designed for the site, and that it would be esthetic.

Intel was described as a manufacturer of semi-conductor assemblies, making such items as memory units for computers.

THE MARQUEE

By Barbara Bladen

It is pure coincidence that MGM is filming "Rico," an action drama about the search by a brilliant trial lawyer for a black man who had been acquitted of a murder charge in San Francisco, just when the city is in a deadly panic over the Zebra killings.

But the logistics and added security that are always necessary to a producer working against time and budget hasn't posed any problems, according to Douglas Netter. I followed him around one day last week while some heavy fist-cuffs and real man-to-man combat were being shot at the burned out Korean Presbyterian Church in the Mission District.

The setting is the quaint vacated church on Guerrero Street in the middle of the block between St. James Church and Immaculate Conception Girls' School where arsonists set the pre-dawn conflagration last year to protest its use as a religious center for gays.

I arrived in time to see Dean Martin, as the lawyer Rico, being pummeled by screen and television actor Thalmus Rasulala who plays the suspected murderer. And there seemed little faking and soft punching. But the frightening stuff was yet to come, after the location crew had broken for picnic style lunch in an alley behind the church.

The neighborhood school children got a big kick out of watching the technicians, executives, real and movie policemen in uniform, actors and extras lining up with plastic trays, cutlery and paper plates to serve themselves cafeteria style from the mobile catering kitchen. That week they doubled their excitement by lining the sidewalks only two blocks away on Dolores Street to watch Michael Douglas and Karl Malden shoot a segment of "Streets of San Francisco."

After lunch, I stood with the pretty blonde wife of the film's star, Kathy Hawk while the doubles went at each other in a brutal chase around the charred pews and past the smoke-scarred altar.

Netter had found the property for Martin after their association on all Martin's Matt Helm films and their working partnership on "The Ambushers." And they meant it to have the San Francisco locale from the beginning.

"The character of Joe Rico has to be a poor guy from an Italian neighborhood who is involved in ethnic identification with an Irish chief of police. The involvement is such that we needed a confined metropolitan area. There are few ethnic neighborhoods in Los Angeles and none as easily identified as Fisherman's Wharf," Netter explained.

They're here for two weeks, shooting from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. and looking at daily rushes on Fell Street.

Others in the cast include Geraldine Brooks, Cindy Williams and Eugene Roche. Netter wanted Dean "to work with accomplished actors, not personalities."

"That's why we hired New York director Paul Bogart. He's won three Emmy Awards and loves working with words and people, although there is a lot of action in the picture too."

Even Martin, his wife and the crew were impressed with the rough and tumble physical alacrity of the stuntmen doubles who rehearsed their fight in slow motion silence about four times until the director said, "roll." Then all hell broke loose in that confined little church as Martin's double, George Fischer, made a dash for the charred bell tower and was tackled and assaulted by the stuntman assailant.

It looked harrowingly real to us all, including Dean who laughed nervously and made several explosively kidding quips to indicate his admiration for the two guys and his relief at not having to do it himself.

"We submitted the script to your police department and except for a few suggestions regarding a violently depicted red-neck officer, it was approved."

"Naturally they told us where and when we couldn't shoot because of certain surveillance and security factors. But we confer every day with the officer in charge of the movie unit and they've been very cooperative. We have two police officers assigned to us every day. They are sharp about movie making and even know camera angles."

Golf Trophy To Honor Petrocchi

For the first time in its 18-year history the Daly City Chamber of Commerce annual golf tournament will award a perpetual trophy honoring the late Roland "Lo" Petrocchi.

Police Chief Petrocchi died Easter Sunday after serving the city for more than 30 years.

He was an avid golfer and never missed the annual chamber tournament held at Lake Merced Country Club.

The perpetual trophy, with a replica of Chief Petrocchi's badge and standing some two feet high, will be on permanent display in City Hall, it was understood.

The winner will be given a smaller trophy for home display, according to tournament chairman Vince Merlo.

Another "first" for this year's tournament, now set for June 6, is a new car for a hole-in-one contest. Prizes thus far collected include a portable color TV set, golf clubs and similar accessories.

Serramonte Concert Choir To Perform

Serramonte High School's concert choir will present a gala spring concert tomorrow at 8 p.m. in the Little Theater at the school.

Included in the evening's program will be a performance by an orchestra made up of Serramonte and Westmoor High students and students from Benjamin Franklin Intermediate School.

The total program will be under the direction of Charles Sheaffer, intern music teacher at Serramonte High School.

Admission of $1 will be charged at the door.

Michel and Nadia Now Le Parisien

Back in 1972, Michel and Nadia Janicka had a good thing going. They were operating the small but popular Le Parisien restaurant at 1136 Broadway in Burlingame, offering a quality of French food that instantly won them the respect of Peninsula diners who were looking for something special. The menu is somewhat different, although it is still compact, allowing Michel the opportunity to perfect those dishes in which he specializes. Crabe en Chemise consists of crab, cream, cheese and white wine sauce and justifiably heads the menu. This specialty, as well as the others on the menu, is served with soup, salad and coffee. Donut World, located on the lower level of the Tanforan Park Shopping Center, is a shopper's delight. Featuring both fancy and filled donuts, Donut World's reputation is based on the fact that all their donuts are prepared fresh daily. As a special for four days only (today through Saturday, May 25), Donut World is offering a dozen Old Fashioned donuts for just 99 cents.

CORDIAL HOST — Richard Trainor is one of the guardians of Scotty Campbell's reputation for the over-all excellence of both food and service. A legion of articulate diners are attracted to this award-winning Redwood City restaurant nightly.

Vince's Italian and Seafood Restaurant

There are several good reasons why Vince Licata's San Mateo restaurant is a favorite stop-off for fanciers of seafood specialties and Italian food, among which is the cooking artistry of know-how chefs, courteous and efficient service, and menu variety. All varieties of fresh fish (when available) are also prepared to go at Vince's Italian and Seafood Restaurant. Child's plate available. A comfortable lounge for cocktails and small talk. Take advantage of the money-saving offer now available at Steaks Unique, one of nine Garden Restaurants located in the Tanforan Park Shopping Center, San Bruno. It's a 12-ounce Rib Steak (under the heading of "Cattleman's Favorite") which includes baked potato and garlic bread. All for $2.99. The special, which usually tabs out at $3.99, is owner Jack Ghio's money-saver feature through May 26. One of several excellent dinners to try at the Marmite restaurant in Redwood City is the Cannelloni. It's served with a tossed salad, a spinach Swiss souffle and a mini loaf.

COMPLIMENTS GALORE — Murray Lehr's immensely successful Lehr's Greenhouse restaurant in San Francisco is a perfect setting for gourmet dining. A beautiful garden is filled with hundreds of flowers, plants and towering banana palm trees.

Super Stars

We don't know if we've become jaded, or if there just are no more real super stars in the major leagues anymore.

Oh, we know about Henry Aaron, but he's no longer a super star. He's merely, now, very good. Al Kaline has been reduced to a designated hitter. Carl Yastrzmski never has quite lived up to his super star promise. What about the likes of Bobby Bonds and Reggie Jackson, you say? They are very good, and very exciting, but Bonds is a lifetime .275 hitter and Jackson is a lifetime .265 hitter and Bonds has nowhere the instincts of a Willie Mays, and Jackson still hasn't learned to field properly.

Cesar Cedeno might qualify someday, but not yet. We suppose the closest to our idea of super stars currently playing are Pete Rose, Johnny Bench, Tom Seaver and Nolan Ryan. But Rose doesn't hit the long ball often enough or steal enough bases, Bench doesn't run well enough, Seaver is so efficient he just isn't colorful, and Ryan is much too erratic.

Actually, the more we think about it, the less we are able to define exactly what a super star is, or should be. We once made a rather lengthy, technical definition of our conception of a super star, but whatever that was seems to become more invalid the longer we live.

So-called superstardom (a term we've always felt has been too carelessly used), in short, really can't be intellectualized. It consists of that intangible something which makes you jump out of bed 10 minutes early to grab the morning newspaper before anybody else in the family gets to it so that you can be the first to discover how many men Bobby Feller struck out yesterday, or if Sandy Koufax pitched ANOTHER no hitter, or to scramble through the box scores of teams you don't even root for to see how Joe DiMaggio or Mickey Mantle or Ted Williams or Stan Musial did.

WE GUESS that's how we can tell that the genuine super stars are gone. We don't jump out of bed 10 minutes early anymore to see how Pete Rose or Johnny Bench or Reggie Jackson did. Of course, there will be some cynics who will say that the reason we don't surge out of bed 10 minutes early anymore to do those things is that we are getting too damned old, both physically and emotionally. It would be hard to argue that point, and it in fact may even be true. But have any of the current "super stars" ever, in one season, led the league in hitting (.376), hits (230), doubles (46), triples (18), runs scored (135), RBI (131), total bases (429), slugging average (.688), and missed leading in homers by just one, while hitting "only" 39 of them? (And on four different occasions got five hits in one game). That's what Musial did in 1948, and we can guarantee you that if

Tigers Gain Spot In CCS Playoffs

Sudden death for Half Moon Bay High came in the bottom of the sixth inning Friday.

HMB and Terra Nova, NPL baseball co-champions had split their regular season series and met to decide which of the two would represent the league in the Central Coast Section regional playoffs.

It was a one-game series, at neutral College of San Mateo, sudden death. With the score knotted 2-2 in the bottom of the sixth, Terra Nova's Bob Downing drew a walk and stole second. Reggie Pomicpic ripped a double, Downing scored and Terra Nova had a 3-2 win.

HMB couldn't dent triumphant senior righthander Pete Wathen in the seventh.

Actually Wathen had to split the glory. And by the rules he wouldn't have gotten the win, though he started, finished and pitched to every batter but one.

In the top of the sixth Wathen was a victim of several HMB bounces. Speedy Cougar Mike Mueller hit a three-hopper past Wathen; shortstop Downing and second baseman Bob Hinch grazed each other going after it. Infield hit.

Rick Abbott tapped a swinging bunt that barely reached Wathen, who had to go to first. With two out, Ray Reyes hit a ball off first baseman Gary Chirole's glove — the ball ricocheted into the corner for a double, scoring Mueller.

Tiger coach Marty Coil then brought in Steve Shirley from right field to pitch to the last man of the inning. Shirley got a strikeout and became the pitcher of record.

But high school rules say that in some circumstances the win may be given to the most effective pitcher. In any case, Wathen got it. He was certainly effective. He struck out nine, walked none and allowed one earned run.

Losing pitcher Ray Reyes allowed five hits and fanned four.

Terra Nova took a 1-0 lead in the first on a double by Shirley and a single by Chirole. The Tigers upped the lead to 2-0 in the 3rd. Keith Lusk doubled and went to third on Bob Downing's bunt hit. Lusk scored on a passed ball.

Half Moon Bay closed to 2-1 in the fourth. Rick Abbott hit a grounder to short; the throw to first was high, and when the first baseman came down on the bag, he dropped the ball. A passed ball moved Abbott to second, and he scored on Perry Martin's single to left.

Wathen, 11-0 in NPL play last year, finished 4-2 this season with a 3.03 ERA.

Terra Nova advances to CCS regional play against WCAL champion Bellarmine tomorrow afternoon at Washington Park in Burlingame.

Seven Cougars Make All-NPL

It may have been tough to make the Half Moon Bay varsity, but for those who stuck it out the rewards were plentiful this year.

Co-champions of the rough North Peninsula League, the HMB Cougar baseball team placed seven of their eleven total players on either first or second all-league, while fellow title-holder Terra Nova managed six spots on the first two squads.

Player of the Year honors, as expected, went to senior lefthander Steve Shirley, who pitched the Tigers into first place with a 1.30 ERA in 65 innings. He struck out 94, allowing only 33 hits in garnering a 6-2 record. Shirley also led Tigers at the plate with a .380 batting average, including 14 RBIs.

Senior righthander Jeff Ormonde evenly split innings pitched and won-lost marks with Cougar teammate Ramon Reyes (both had 5-2 records) but Ormonde's 1.20 ERA earned him first team selection. Dennis Collier, the only South San Francisco representative on either team, was the third pitcher chosen by coaches Thursday.

Four Locals Make State JC Meet

By FRED BAER
Post Correspondent

PLEASANT HILL — San Mateo County will have four athletes in five spots in the California Junior College Association track and field championships Saturday in Bakersfield.

Skyline was by far the most successful of the County's three teams during the Northern California JC championships Saturday evening at Diablo Valley, scoring 26 points — far more than any other member of the North's three small classification conferences.

The County's lone champion was Skyline intermediate hurdler Jim Wyatt, who won convincingly in 53.5 over Foothill's John Foster. Trojan Ike Allmond was fourth in 54.4. Allmond was a double state qualifier, running fourth in the highs too.

And Wyatt becomes the State's only unbeaten hurdler.

Trojan frosh miler Tony Fotinos put on his usual strong last lap sprint to take second in the mile in 4:15.8

behind Mike Schaecher of West Valley (4:11.3).

The County's remaining State qualifier was Menlo high jumper Pete McMurrin, who placed fourth at 6-6. That was also the second place height but McMurrin took two tries to clear 6-6 and was displaced on the more misses rule.

Royals Ink CSM Star

College of San Mateo pitcher Mark Souza has signed a bonus contract with the Kansas City Royals of the American League.

The 6-foot, 175-pound lefthander, who compiled a 20-6 career record at CSM, will report to the Royals Sarasota, Fla. farm club next month, according to Dick Hager, the Royals' scout who signed him Saturday.

Souza forged an 8-2 Golden Gate Conference record this year and an 11-2 record for the season.

Three Trojans On Star Team

Skyline College's Phil Frederico was named Thursday to the All-Coast Conference baseball team.

Frederico, who started the season at first base and moved to shortstop, was tabbed as top utility infielder. Frederico, a sophomore, hit .270 in CC play and .333 on the season.

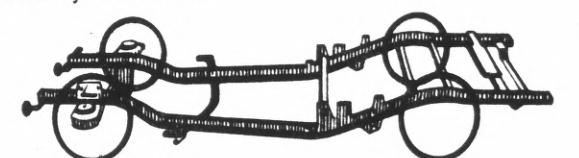

There was no second team chosen but two Trojans made honorable mention, infielder Bob Trask and pitcher Jim Raymond. Raymond, who beat each Coast Conference team, finished with a 6-3 league record and a 2.57 ERA.

ALL-COAST CONFERENCE

Five Records Fall in Region I Track

By CHRISTOPHER STAVE
Post Sports Writer

Five records were smashed and two Mid-Peninsula League teams fared well without key personnel in Saturday's Central Coast Section Region I track and field meet at College of San Mateo.

St. Francis, the favorite, took 45 points and the region team title.

But MPL champion Mills, missing Earl Caldwell, the region's top pole vaulter, scored 38 for a close second. And San Mateo, which ended up missing a runner from each of its relay teams, won both and finished third with 28 points.

Leading the Mills' heroes was Bob Dillard, a tall junior who filled in admirably for Caldwell with a win in the pole vault and also a share of the meet record in the high jump.

Dillard vaulted 13-6. He finished second to St. Francis' Bill Maston in the high jump, both leaped 6-5 1/2, to best the old mark of 6-5. Last week, Dillard had gone 6-4; before that he'd never done better than 6-2.

"It wasn't till last week I learned I'd been planting my foot wrong," he said. "I'm just starting to get it together."

Mills' soph Ken Vasquez won the long jump at 23-0 1/2, well ahead of teammate Clay Bullwinkle. And Vasquez brother Ken finished a strong second in the half mile to St. Francis' star Mike Kasser. Kasser ran a meet record 1:54.4; Vasquez finished in 1:55.5, leaning forward to nose out Crestmoor's Brian Pierce by a tenth of a second.

San Mateo had some people on the spot, and they came through admirably. Junior Bob Foulke was the only athlete who figured in three wins. He anchored both relays and won the 100 in 9.9, ahead of his year-long rival, Jay Ashley of Cap.

But San Mateo soph Kevin Groves had an even tougher task. He'd been thrust up to the varsity this week to fill in for injured mile relay runner Andy Gustavson. And only a few minutes before the 440 relay, he discovered that one of the Bearcats' runners had been disqualified — he'd have to run with that quartet as well.

He succeeded superbly. The Bearcat quartet relay team, an underdog, won in a season-best time of 43.6. Later, Groves ran a 50.7 second quarter on the winning mile relay team — Foulke anchored in 50.6 as the Bearcats won in 3:25.3.

Gustavson hopes to return for Friday night's Central Coast Section meet at San Jose City College, but if the muscle pull in his leg hasn't healed, Groves will be ready.

"The coach (Don Dooley) took me aside," said Groves, "and asked me if I'd run with the varsity. He said the mile relay team had worked hard and deserved a chance at the big meets. He told me I might have to give up a frosh-soph invitational, but I said I'd be glad to help out."

NPL champion Oceana picked up two wins, one of them an upset. Junior miler Bill LaForge won, as expected, and did it in record time, running a 62-second final quarter and finishing in 4:18.8. Westmoor's Tony Tarentino was second with a season-best 4:26.4. A freshman, Serra's Stan Ross, ran 4:29.9 for fifth.

Oceana shot putter Gerrit Schram has been consistent all year, and that consistency paid off in a surprise win. He threw 54-6, equal to his season best, while a number of WCAL honchos who qualified with better marks did relatively poorly. Hillsdale's Mark Reynolds was third at 32-10, also a mild upset.

Mitty's Craig Watkins threw the discus 180-11 for a meet record. Kasser and Watkins earned the outstanding track and field competitor awards presented by the CSM track program.

St. Francis' Alton Page set a record with a 45-8 1/2 triple jump. Tom Shellworth of Bellarmine won the low hurdles in 19.9, which established a record because the event was being run around a turn for the first time.

Perhaps the most disappointed athlete at the meet was Bob Barnett, the CCS two-mile leader going into the meet. Barnett, who'd gone home sick from school the day before, finished fifth, a half minute off his best time — and only the first four qualified for Friday night's WCCS meet.

"I really wanted to go this year," Barnett said. "But I was really tired. I feel all right just walking around, but not running." Barnett is only a junior, though, and will have another chance next year.

Le Pacini Super Stars

he were doing it in 1974, we'd be jumping out of bed 10 minutes early to read all about it.

WHICH BRINGS US to a rather related subject, that being the statement often heard from fans that so-and-so is a great player, but doesn't do particularly well under pressure.

That in itself is a false statement, because the really great players almost always do better in pressure situations than they do ordinarily, which is our way of saying that a player isn't a really great one if he can't perform especially effectively under pressure.

Look up World Series and All Star game and playoff and Super Bowl records and championship fights, and almost invariably you will find that the truly great players have their best games and series of games in such tension situations.

ONE OF THE PROBLEMS in writing a weekly column, as we've discussed in years past, is that it is easy to embarrass oneself. The column must be turned into the newspaper at least five or six days before it is actually published, and it is seldom written in one day, but generally over a period of several days, so that by the time the material the columnist presents is published, it is often 10 days to, occasionally, two weeks old. And in sports, situations can change radically in just a couple of days. This is one of the reasons why we hardly ever make predictions, unless they're over a long span of time.

For example, just a few weeks ago we questioned the high ranking by baseball experts of Houston, remarking that the Astros' starting pitching corps didn't impress us, that their relief pitching was virtually nil, and that they had a relatively weak bench. We couldn't understand how they could be ranked over the Giants, and in many cases, over the Reds and Dodgers.

Yet, the Astros are the only Western Division team (as we write this) to have given the Dodgers any kind of a real race. And how have they done it? With pretty solid starting pitching, fine relief pitching, and apparently a superb bench.

Of course, at the time we wrote that, Larry Dierker seemed about finished. He hadn't completed a game in two years. Since then, he has compiled a 2.17 ERA and more than one completed game. We had no way of knowing that an until then ineffective relief pitcher, Ken Forsch would, to this point, have the best ERA (1.26) in the National League. And then, when sterling shortstop Roger Metzger and All Star second baseman Tommy Helms were injured almost at the same time, how could we possibly know that a St. Louis castoff named Mick Kelleher would fill in so ably for Metzger, and a rookie non-entity named Melbourne could adequately fill Helms' spikes? It was, as a matter of fact, after Kelleher and Melbourne took over that the Astros took off.

And in questioning the validity of a Dodger team then playing over .700 ball (and still doing it), how could we possibly predict that this late in the season they would still be leading the NL in homers, (only one behind major league leader Oakland), the major leagues in runs scored, and hitting .275 as a team with a major league leading team ERA of 2.24? Not the Dodgers, the old paty-cake hitting team. The ERA yes, but the hitting, no.

On the other hand, how could we have predicted that the Giants, one of the most feared hitting teams in the big leagues, would be toward the bottom in every hitting category, but only third in the majors behind the Dodgers and Orioles in team ERA (3.06)? Yes, those same Giants who for some mysterious reason have always been able to develop great young hitters but only mediocre young pitchers, despite having one of baseball's all-time great pitchers, Carl Hubbell, as chief of their farm system.

HOW COULD WE have predicted that the most brilliant young shortstop in the game two years ago — Chris Speier — would suddenly be playing fourth fiddle in his own division to Metzger and Dodger Bill Russell, both suddenly .300 hitters making fewer errors and better plays than Speier, who has suddenly become a .230 hitter with little apparent power; and to Cincinnati's Dave Concepcion, whom Speier out-weighs by 35 pounds, but who is out-homering Speier and also fielding well.

What really saddens us, is after having made all of these confessions about our short-comings as a seer, is that by the time this appears, everything we had originally indicated may indeed have already happened, and that our apologies may be invalid! So don't be surprised to see the Astros deep in fourth place, the Giants' pitching getting blasted while the hitters are scoring eight runs a game, and the Dodgers in a horrible batting slump but hanging, tenaciously to a lead with great pitching.

San Mateo College Is 'Shortchanged'

College of San Mateo's Berriatua. Berriatua had also lost a first-team runoff vote.

Chabot ended up with 11 men on the two teams, including two pitchers and a designated hitter, indicating that GGC coaches firmly believe in rewarding a winner.

Judge Dismisses Coast Murder Charge

By BOB PETERSON

Barbara Hickey sat, cupping her hands to hold her bowed head, and periodically rubbed a tear from her eye.

"I didn't want to shoot my husband at all," said the Pacifica housewife, who was testifying on her own behalf in the shooting death of Carlos Hickey, 37, on March 31 in San Bruno.

Her testimony in the preliminary hearing before Municipal Court Judge James Miller in South San Francisco recently, and that of several of her children, eventually led last week to a dismissal of the murder charges against the 41-year-old woman.

Deputy Dist. Atty. John Guheen, in asking dismissal, said evidence was not adequate to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that Mrs. Hickey did not act in "defense of a third person" — her son.

Hickey, died in surgery at Peninsula Hospital after being shot in the left side with a .38-caliber revolver, officials said.

Testimony during the preliminary hearing of the case revealed that the estranged husband had been threatening his wife's life and on one occasion, several days prior to the shooting, had beaten her.

The on-going altercation climaxed at the Pacific Heights Shopping Center in San Bruno March 31 when the husband confronted his wife and her three children.

According to testimony, the husband first backed his car into his wife's vehicle, being driven by his stepdaughter.

Hickey, then, according to testimony, attempted to lift the hood of the car he'd run into, which led to words between him and his stepdaughter, it was explained.

At that point, it was testified, Mrs. Hickey's son intervened and the young man was struck by his stepfather.

A second daughter of Mrs. Hickey ran to a phone, apparently to call police, and the husband ran after her.

It was testified that the son caught up with the husband and began wrestling with him, and at that point two shots were fired.

"I honestly don't remember even shooting," said Mrs. Hickey. "I had the gun. I just remember standing there. That was the first time I ever shot a gun."

Mrs. Hickey said she had taken the gun from a friend's house after her husband had beat her. "because I wanted some kind of protection. I was just afraid. He was threatening to kill me," she testified.

Guheen said if further evidence is obtained, or the evaluation of the existing evidence changes, a new charge could be filed. "At this time, we're not prepared to do it," he said.

Bypass Plan Frustrated

No Devil's Slide Alternative?

If the state approved a priority in funding for a two-lane bypass of Devil's Slide on Cabrillo Highway it would delay construction of a four-lane project, Dep. County Engineer Robert Sans informed the Board of Supervisors last week.

Board Chairwoman Jean Fassler asked Sans to investigate the possibility of a two-lane road two weeks ago after a State Department of Transportation official reported that construction of a four-lane bypass probably couldn't start until 1979 or 1980 because of a lack of funding.

Not only would a two-lane road, even if it could be moved up in financing priority, delay funding for a four-lane road, it would end up with steep grade and no passing lanes for trucks, Sans reported.

"Well, it wouldn't be sliding down into the ocean, and that makes a difference," Mrs. Fassler stated.

The county lost out on construction of a bypass, which had been funded, when a Federal Court judge ruled two years ago that the state had bypassed a requirement for an environmental impact report in planning the project. When such a report was decreed by the court, the financing was withdrawn.

Mrs. Fassler placed the blame on the Department of Transportation for "trying to sidestep" the environmental report.

"We've slipped backwards," she stated. "We've been blaming everybody but those responsible. The state tried to take it out of federal financing, but found it had to comply anyway (with the environmental impact report)."

Psychology Workshop Set

A Psychology Workshop will be given in six evening sessions beginning May 29 and continuing through July 3, by Linda Hersh, a Social Science instructor at Terra Nova High School in Pacifica.

Classes will be held from 7:30 to 10 at St. Andrew United Presbyterian Church on Valencia Way in Pacifica.

The main intent of the workshop is to heighten one's awareness of both self and others through the study of psychology. Hersh will focus one session on validation, which is what she says we continually need from others to assure ourselves that we are being accepted, liked and heard.

Another session will be spent on the topic of manipulation: what we say and do in order to elicit a desired response from our mates, lovers, parents and children.

Pacifica's City Council relented early May 14 in its plan to become the first San Mateo County city to ban sale of all fireworks, including the "safe and sane" variety.

Instead, after hearing protests from numerous youth organizations, the councilmen approved a compromise. No one under 18 years of age may buy or sell fireworks.

To nail down the ban, they specified that in case of any violation, the fireworks stand permit is subject to suspension, and the organization may be barred from operating a stand for five years.

"The basic problems from fireworks," declared American Legion Post Commander Emory Lebonville, "are the noise, the injuries and fires. If you ban sale of safe and sane fireworks in Pacifica, you will still have the noise, the injuries and fires. But we will have none of the benefits of selling our fireworks."

Lebonville proposed providing an educational printed sheet with each sale.

explaining to the buyers the proper use of fireworks.

Lebonville also pointed out the annual civic fireworks display, financed in part by local sale of fireworks.

"We've painted curbs, gathered bottles and sold cookies," declared Bill Clinton, committee chairman of Boy Scout Troop 264.

"We were creating a burden on Pacifica citizens. With a portion of the effort, we have sold fireworks, making $900 to $1,800 a season. It has kept our camping program going all year.

Many boys can go to camp at half-price, as a result."

Other protesters stressed the impossibility of keeping Pacificans from "going over the hill" to buy their fireworks, with Pacifica losing sales tax, youth funds and business as a result. An estimated $15,000 a year is spent on youth work in Pacifica, from sale of fireworks, according to Alfred Rose, a former active Pacifican Legionnaire.

"With fewer programs for kids, you'll find more of them in the streets," he warned.

Pushing at first for the complete ban was Councilman Stan Farber. He told of little boys coming into his pharmacy with badly burned hands. Taking some steam out of his plan to ban fireworks was the refusal of councilmen in neighboring cities to go along. He had raised the proposal for a countywide ban at a recent meeting of the Northern San Mateo County Council of Cities.

Terra Nova To Elect Officers

By ANNE HILO
Campus Correspondent
For the first time in Terra Nova High School's history, elections of the student body executive board and class officers will be held at the same time during the spring semester for next year's fall semester.
Pat Michel, activities director, said, "If we hold elections now, instead of the fall, immediate action will take place."
Terra Nova's spirit staff election results for 1974-75

County Board Ok's Sale of HMB Land

County Manager M. D. Tarshes was authorized by the Board of Supervisors Tuesday to proceed with the sale of the 20-acre Casenelli property to the city of Half Moon Bay.

The action came after the board found the sale of the property, once envisioned as a coastside county-city government center, would be in conformity with the County General Plan.

Half Moon Bay, which wants the property for a park and recreation area, has agreed to pay the county the original cost of the site, $40,000.

Watering Calls for Good Judgment

By IVA NEWMAN

Watering is one of the most important jobs whenever plants are grown. We are often asked "How much water does it need and how often?" This is not possible to answer accurately because plants differ in their need and one has to take into consideration their placement and the soil in which they are growing as well as the type of plant.

Water is not only a plant nutrient in itself, but it is also a conveyor of other nutrient elements that must be taken up in solution through the root hairs. No one can actually teach you how to water. It must be learned through close observation of the plant and the conditions which surround it.

Plants get dry much faster when placed where they get strong light and dry air due to the more rapid loss of water by transpiration through the leaves. By the same token, subdued light and moisture-laden air reduce the amount of water needed by the roots. Leaf wilting occurs when the soil becomes so dry that the roots are unable to supply enough water to keep the cells distended.

Some plants will recover from an occasional wilting with very little injury, but hardwooded plants in pots may not recover if allowed to become so dry that wilting occurs. Complete immersion of the pot until the bubbles stop rising from the soil is the best way to help the plant, but even this will not help too often.

Plants set out in the garden will not require such frequent watering as those in pots, but in any case it should be well done when it is needed. Surface watering will not supply the needs. On the other hand most plants object to soil that is continually saturated. Their roots rot and a foul odor may be noticed. Proper drainage is necessary to allow the free passage of water which the soil cannot readily absorb.

Plants should be thoroughly soaked before being repotted. It is also best to water immediately after potting, then wait for the soil to get somewhat dry before watering again. Overwatering before the roots can begin working freely in the new soil is likely to cause trouble.

Different Soil Types

The Peninsula has so many different types of soil ranging from heavy, black adobe through yellow clay to sandy loam and even pure sand that each home owner must learn his plants needs. We use a soil sampling tube to set up a watering schedule. This tube is sold by some garden shops and by firms that offer greenskeeper's equipment. The tube has an open strip along its full length. You just push the tube into the lawn, flower bed, shrubbery border or among the vegetables. When it is at the depth you wish to inspect, twist it and pull it out. The open strip shows the condition of the soil. Damp soil in the tube shows the area that has plenty of moisture, below dry soil shows that the water should have been left on longer. A muddy soil is often accompanied by a foul smell, warning you to hold back on the water or increase the drainage in that area.

Gardens with a sand base are usually well-drained. Those on slopes are not as a general rule. When planting on a slope, dig the holes then fill one or two with water right up to the brim. Check the time it takes to drain and while the soil is still wet fill it again and again check the time. If the water drains completely away within a half hour or less the drainage would be adequate for most winter seasons and all summer ones. If it takes longer, then drainage should be improved.

On level ground, when drainage is found to be poor, better drainage can be had by planting in raised beds.

Using a soil tube will show you how long the sprinkler should be allowed to run and how frequently water must be applied. Start by pushing the soil tube into the soil as far as it will go. Check the soil for moisture and if the soil isn't moist enough for good plant growth start the sprinkler. After 10 minutes, shut the water off and check the soil again. Repeat this until the soil is moist enough to support the plant to its full root depth and mark the time down. The next day and each day after that push the soil tube into the watered area and check for moisture. When the soil gets too dry to stay in a ball when you squeeze it, water. This test shows how long water must run on that area and the number of days between applications. By charting these in a garden book you can work up an almost fool-proof watering schedule.

Test All Areas

Do not stop at one area of testing as different plants need different amounts of water. Also temperatures do not stay the same. During stretches of hot weather the days between applications will be fewer and transpiration will be greater. In the fall when the weather becomes cooler the applications can be stretched farther and farther apart.

This year, due to the late rains, most gardens have some fungus problems. Rosarians are complaining about black spot and rust. These are problems we don't really have to deal with until fall. Black spot is a real problem for the first time in that we have around five months without rain and black spot spores need moisture to germinate, but this year the rains stayed late and the weather was warm enough to permit this fungus to become a real problem. So when watering soak the soil but keep the foliage dry.

If you grow a number of potted plants group them according to type so that they can be watered all at the same time without giving any one of them too much. During hot weather always fill the space at the top of the pot three or four times to be sure all the soil is wet. Also, every two or three weeks dunk the pots in a pail of water and hold them down until the bubbles stop.

Bonsai growers often water their plants two and three times a day during hot weather. These plants are really confined for root space so special watering is needed to keep them going. These too, are dunked about every two weeks just to make sure the roots have the needed moisture.

Camellias and rhododendrons especially need overhead watering during the hot weather. They transpire a great deal of moisture and overhead watering cools the leaves and helps to keep the plants happy. Wind also whips moisture out of foliage so check often during these windy spring days.

Peninsula Ferry Service?

Would you believe a commuter ferry from the Port of Redwood City to San Francisco, with stops at Foster City, San Francisco Airport and South San Francisco?

Researchers for the Port are studying the possibility, and are assessing demand for such a venture.

Researcher Daniel J. McNichol made the disclosure Thursday to Port Commissioners during a "progress report" of a study on how the Port can expand.

"The problem is whether it's financially feasible," McNichol said. "We'll compare the ferry with the cost and time of Southern Pacific and the freeway."

His boss, James Kuebelbeck, said a Peninsula ferry system "probably would need subsidy or to become part of some government transit plan" in order to become economically practical.

He further stated that technology is studying ways to make ferries "go 22-knots without making everybody seasick. There's a re-interest in the ferry to get people off roadways."

While researchers aren't sure of the demand for a ferry, they're certain of demand for a marina and a new restaurant, plus commercial specialty shops at the Port.

Meanwhile, it was contained in a report which Port officials initially wanted to conceal from the press that Port income has "declined critically in the last three years."

"In fact," the report said, "if it had not been for interest income from investment of earned surpluses, the Port would have been unable to pay debt service on outstanding bonds. Therefore, in point of fact, the Port has been operating at a loss for the past three years."

It was only after strong protests by The Times that the report was made available.

Officials tried to conceal it on the basis it was simply a work sheet and that figures contained in it could be changed after more research.
